STEADY RISING IN STOCK PRICE AND BIDS NOTED

Washington Not Afraid of Runaway With Powers Given Board

DIVIDENDS CAUSE UPSWING

Credit Expansion Limited Under Sec Statute

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—(UP)—Administration officials today ordered a close watch on the rising stock market and prepared to use all their resources if necessary to prevent it from getting out of control.

Federal Reserve board and Securities and Exchange commission officials noted the steady upswing in trading and stock prices, but felt there was little danger of a runaway market.

Chairman Marriner Eccles of the Federal Reserve board, was checking constantly on developments.

Powers Explained

It was pointed out that the reserve board—should the situation develop runaway proportions—could exercise three powers. They are:

- 1.—Increase excess reserve requirements for member banks to prevent further credit expansion.
- 2.—Increase margin requirements, which now are 55 cents on every one dollar of stock bought on the margin.
- 3.—Tighten requirements on bankers loans, which are running around $1,000,000,000 weekly or less than one-third of 1929.

The board requires brokers to get their loans from Federal Reserve member banks. It was pointed out that since the market is largely "cash" credit controls might not entirely cope with the situation.

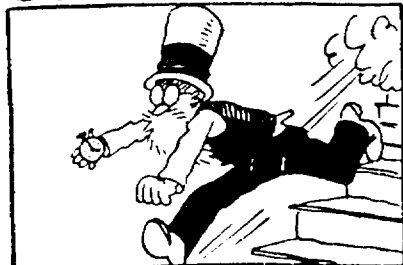

Officials Not Worried

SEC officials professed not to be worried about the situation. Officials attributed much of the rise to the recent wave of dividends because of increased earnings and the forthcoming tax on undistributed surplus, and because of the present "easy money" conditions.

So much so that he has issued a challenge to Carl Carlson, of Audubon, Iowa, winner of the national corn-husking title. DRIVE OF RED CROSS STARTS WITH SUCCESS

The efficient work of the American Red Cross throughout the world was being recounted Thursday as Circleville and Pickaway county workers continued their intensive campaign, opened Wednesday. The drive will continue until Thanksgiving.

Unusual success was reported from several areas with Margaret Boggs, soliciting for her mother, Mrs. John G. Boggs, obtaining $18 in contributions after only a half day's work. Several others were very successful in their efforts.

The Red Cross has been active for the last 55 years. It has carried assistance in the form of food, clothing, shelter, medical aid, rehabilitation of homes and families to more than 1,200 scenes of disaster large and small. During this time millions of dollars have been expended by the organization as an agency of the American people in giving relief.

Ray W. Davis, Pickaway county chairman, declared Thursday that every dollar contributed is accounted for to the congress of the nation through a war department audit.

"The number of families aided through disaster during the last year amounted to approximately 131,000. In this relief work the Red Cross expended $5,232,052.48, although at the end of the fiscal year on June 30th relief work was still incomplete as a result of the spring floods and tornadoes. In the spring floods and tornadoes alone, the Red Cross was called on to aid 77,000 families, and in the tornado zones in Georgia, Mississippi, North Carolina and Tennessee more than 6,000 families required this assistance," Mr. Davis said.

Community in Deep South Seeks Return of Infant, Modern Moses

PEARL RIVER, La., Nov. 12.—(UP)—This community of the Louisiana scrub pine forests massed its resources today to fight for possession of a modern day Moses, destined, the superstitious believed, to lead the indigent but yearning of the countryside from the wilderness.

Out of the dreary forest at dusk trotted a large dog who deposited the ragged bundle he was carrying in his mouth, in the clearing around the one room shanty of Louis E. Crawford, and trotted back into the forest. The bundle contained an eight day old baby, large, healthy, with blue eyes, who awed the Crawfords and their neighbors by his serenity.

Taken to Hospital That happened Tuesday night.

Wednesday, the authorities of the parish came to the wilderness, and, over the protests of the Crawfords and their neighbors, took the baby across Lake Pontchartrain to the New Orleans charity hospital, 40 miles away.

Today scores of the poor residents of the pine forests called at the Crawfords, offering what little resources they had, from clothing to money, to repossess the babe they believed of divine origin intended not for the Crawfords alone but for them all.

One of these callers was Sairy Adams who came with her 10-year-old son.

"Let 'em tuck it away from me," she said reprovingly to Mrs. Crawford. Her son was being playful and she said to him: "Hesh up, bubber," then continued: "If a dog came and brung me a baby I wouldn't say nothing at all. But I'd know where it came from."

Others pointed out that God could easily create a dog to deliver a Messiah. Some prayed for a quick return of the babe to the pine forest for which, they believed, omnipresent divinity, aware of their lot, had destined him.

Mrs. Crawford bemoaned the tragedy to all. Only 24 years old, she is worn and aged by the rigors of her existence.

"I didn't have right good sense to let them take that baby," she said. "I was downright foolish to let him get out of my sight."

Authorities of St. Tammany parish believed they had discovered the baby's origin in the story of Sam Ferguson, a truck driver. Tuesday afternoon, a few hours before the dog appeared in the Crawford clearing, he saw a shabby, weary man and woman plodding along the Bogalusa highway, about a mile from the Crawford shanty. The woman carried a baby. A girl of about three and a large, brindled bull dog trailed along behind.

Ferguson told this story: Story Told By Trucker "The man walked with a country walk, like he was used to being behind a plow. The woman looked sickly, like she might have just had a baby. They walked a ways, then sat down to rest. "I heard the woman say, '49 miles to Bogalusa.' The man said, 'No use getting uneasy about it.' And the little girl said, 'I'm hungry.'"

FOUR VETERANS KILLED AS TRUCK STRIKES BRIDGE

MCDONALD, Pa., Nov. 12.—(UP)—Four war veterans were killed and 14 other Civilian Conservation Corps members were injured, when their camp truck struck a bridge abutment and upset last night when they were returning from an Armistice day celebration here.

The victims were identified as Thomas J. Tully, 58, Freedom, Pa.; John A. Dolton, 47, Kane, Pa.; Thomas E. Robertson, 37, Pittsburgh, and Joseph E. Burtoft, 41, Sandusky, Ohio.

The injured were taken to Canonsburg hospital where Joseph C. Burkett, 53, Brockway, and Anthony Kless, 41, Monessen, were found to be critically injured. The others suffered from shock and bruises. Most of them were thrown clear of the truck and into the small creek beneath the bridge.

Police reported that Frank Zuvald, Kane, Pa., driver of the camp truck, lost control on a curve.

O'NEILL AWARDED NOBEL PRIZE FOR HIS LITERATURE

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Nov. 12.—(UP)—Eugene O'Neill, American playwright, has been awarded the 1936 Nobel prize for literature, it was announced today.

O'Neill has been recognized for years as America's outstanding dramatist, his playwrighting career began in 1919 when he wrote the "Moon of the Caribbees" and "Beyond the Horizon."

There soon followed "Emperor Jones," "Anna Christie," "Desire Under the Elms" and others, all successes.

O'Neill successfully defied convention when he wrote "Strange Interlude," requiring 5½ hours to perform. "Mourning Becomes Electra," which was produced in 1931, was another extraordinary production.

FOOTBALL STAR DRINKS LIQUOR, DIES OF EFFECTS

DETROIT, Nov. 12.—(UP)—An 18-year-old high school student and star football player, Frederick Mangas, Jr., lifted a bottle of whiskey to his lips last night; drained the pint within 10 minutes after boasting to two companions "I can take it without pausing for breath."

Mangas was pronounced dead by a physician early today.

The story was told police by Mangas' two companions, Carl Commerson, 17, and Walter Jeckelmann, 18.

"We had promised Fred a party when we got jobs," the youths told police. "We got paid yesterday and called Fred. We had a malted milk at a drug store, then Walter went back and bought a bottle of whiskey."

SCOUTS, GUARDS SEARCHING CITY FOR LITTLE GIRL

NEWTON, Kan., Nov. 12.—(UP)—Baffled police appealed to the entire city today to search garages, basements and vacant lots for three-year-old Gloria Hood who disappeared from her home Tuesday.

Boy Scouts already have made a house-to-house canvas and a company of national guards and 300 citizens walking 30 feet apart combed six sections of land about the city. The only hope they got was from neighbors who said they saw the blond-haired Gloria strolling along the street Tuesday afternoon. They could not remember the exact time. Maybe it was after 3 o'clock when police received their first call from Mrs. Jack Hood, the child's mother.

Police reluctantly admitted the possibility of kidnapping but said they would work out every other theory before turning to that one.

Mrs. Hood put Gloria and two other children to bed Tuesday afternoon for naps and hurried out to do her shopping while they were asleep. Their father, who works nights at a greenhouse, was asleep in another room.

When she returned Mrs. Hood found the front door open. She looked in the children's bedroom and Gloria was gone.

Hopes of merchants to have the Pumpkin Show lights up for the Christmas season faded Thursday when employees of the Southern Ohio Electric Co. began removing the fixtures.

"The lights are not safe to leave up and no one will assume the responsibility in case of an accident," C. T. Gilmore, local manager of the company said. "The lights are owned by the Pumpkin Show society and it would take considerable money to put them up permanently."

"They are anchored in old brick walls. Some came loose three times during the show, and once last week during the snowstorm. If they were to fall in front of an automobile it would be serious."

Last year the lights were kept up during the Christmas season and some merchants attributed large increases in their business to the better street lighting. Efforts have been unsuccessful so far this year to provide sufficient funds to erect the lights more permanently.

Police reported that Frank Zwald, Kane, Pa., driver of the camp truck, lost control on a curve.

O'NEILL AWARDED NOBEL PRIZE FOR HIS LITERATURE

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Nov. 12.—(UP)—Eugene O'Neill, American playwright, has been awarded the 1936 Nobel prize for literature, it was announced today.

O'Neill has been recognized for years as America's outstanding dramatist, his playwrighting career began in 1919 when he wrote the "Moon of the Caribbees" and "Beyond the Horizon."

There soon followed "Emperor Jones," "Anna Christie," "Desire Under the Elms" and others, all successes.

O'Neill successfully defied convention when he wrote "Strange Interlude," requiring 5½ hours to perform. "Mourning Becomes Electra," which was produced in 1931, was another extraordinary production.

The outstanding recognition of the Nobel prizes went to O'Neill in his 48th year. He was the second American to be honored with the Nobel prize for literature, Sinclair Lewis, novelist, having been given it in 1931.

FOOTBALL STAR DRINKS LIQUOR, DIES OF EFFECTS

DETROIT, Nov. 12.—(UP)—An 18-year-old high school student and star football player, Frederick Mangas, Jr., lifted a bottle of whiskey to his lips last night; drained the pint within 10 minutes after boasting to two companions "I can take it without pausing for breath."

Mangas was pronounced dead by a physician early today. The story was told police by Mangas' two companion, Carl Commerson, 17, and Walter Jeckelmann, 18.

"We had promised Fred a party when we got jobs," the youths told police. "We got paid yesterday and called Fred. We had a malted milk at a drug store, then Walter went back and bought a bottle of whiskey."

SCOUTS, GUARDS SEARCHING CITY FOR LITTLE GIRL

NEWTON, Kan., Nov. 12.—(UP)—Baffled police appealed to the entire city today to search garages, basements and vacant lots for three-year-old Gloria Hood who disappeared from her home Tuesday.

Boy Scouts already have made a house-to-house canvas and a company of national guards and 300 citizens walking 30 feet apart combed six sections of land about the city. The only hope they got was from neighbors who said they saw the blond-haired Gloria strolling along the street Tuesday afternoon. They could not remember the exact time. Maybe it was after 3 o'clock when police received their first call from Mrs. Jack Hood, the child's mother.

Police reluctantly admitted the possibility of kidnapping but said they would work out every other theory before turning to that one. Mrs. Hood put Gloria and two other children to bed Tuesday afternoon for naps and hurried out to do her shopping while they were asleep. Their father, who works nights at a greenhouse, was asleep in another room.

When she returned Mrs. Hood found the front door open. She looked in the children's bedroom and Gloria was gone.

Wednesday, the authorities of the parish came to the wilderness, and, over the protests of the Crawfords and their neighbors, took the baby across Lake Pontchartrain to the New Orleans charity hospital, 40 miles away.

Today scores of the poor residents of the pine forests called at the Crawfords, offering what little resources they had, from clothing to money, to repossess the babe they believed of divine origin intended not for the Crawfords alone but for them all.

One of these callers was Sairy Adams who came with her 10-year-old son.

"Let 'em tuck it away from me," she said reprovingly to Mrs. Crawford. Her son was being playful and she said to him: "Hesh up, bubber," then continued: "If a dog came and brung me a baby I wouldn't say nothing at all. But I'd know where it came from."

Others pointed out that God could easily create a dog to deliver a Messiah. Some prayed for a quick return of the babe to the pine forest for which, they believed, omnipresent divinity, aware of their lot, had destined him.

Mrs. Crawford bemoaned the tragedy to all. Only 24 years old, she is worn and aged by the rigors of her existence.

"I didn't have right good sense to let them take that baby," she said. "I was downright foolish to let him get out of my sight."

Authorities of St. Tammany parish believed they had discovered the baby's origin in the story of Sam Ferguson, a truck driver. Tuesday afternoon, a few hours before the dog appeared in the Crawford clearing, he saw a shabby, weary man and woman plodding along the Bogalusa highway, about a mile from the Crawford shanty. The woman carried a baby. A girl of about three and a large, brindle bull dog trailed along behind.

Ferguson told this story: Story Told By Truckee
"The man walked with a country walk, like he was used to being behind a plow. The woman looked sickly, like she might have just had a baby. They walked a ways, then sat down to rest."

"I heard the woman say, '49 miles to Bogalusa.' The man said, 'no use getting uneasy about it.' And the little girl said, 'I'm hungry.'"

Doctors have been watching over the nine-months-old child since last Saturday when he was brought into Cleveland clinic hospital by his distraught parents.

STOCKS IRREGULAR

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—(UP)—Stocks turned irregular on profit-taking today. Volume was heavy with the first hour at a rate of nearly 4,000,000 shares for a full session. Amusement and mercantile issues stood out on the upside, while declines of fractions to a point were noted in some of the motors, steels, oils and utilities. Silvers turned down after their buoyancy Tuesday with U. S. Smelting touching 97 off 4 points.

MADRID, Nov. 12.—(UP)—A heavy artillery barrage rocked Madrid and its environs today as government and nationalist batteries resumed a fierce cannonade.

With rain and poor visibility preventing the powerful aviation forces of either side from operating, the Leftist artillery began shelling the insurgent positions on almost the entire Madrid front, the Nationalists quickly responding and concentrating on the government batteries.

MADRID, Nov. 12.—(UP)—Loyalist militiamen trapped 1,000 picked nationalist storm troops in the western part of the city today and expected to annihilate them.

Moors and Foreign Legionnaires, nationalist soldiers, tried a desperate sortie into the heart of the city.

In the night they filtered through the upper slopes of the Casa Del Campo park on Madrid's west side and managed to cross

Hopes of merchants to have the Pumpkin Show lights up for the Christmas season faded Thursday when employees of the Southern Ohio Electric Co. began removing the fixtures.

"The lights are not safe to leave up and no one will assume the responsibility in case of an accident," C. T. Gilmore, local manager of the company said. "The lights are owned by the Pumpkin Show society and it would take considerable money to put them up permanently."

"They are anchored in old brick walls. Some came loose three times during the show, and once last week during the snowstorm. If they were to fall in front of an automobile it would be serious."

Last year the lights were kept up during the Christmas season and some merchants attributed large increases in their business to the better street lighting. Efforts have been unsuccessful so far this year to provide sufficient funds to erect the lights more permanently.

Extension of Logan street eastward for several hundred feet was started Thursday morning by the city service department.

The extension was requested some time ago in council with a petition from property owners. Several homes are to be constructed in the district.

MRS. PRICE DOESN'T CARE FOR OFFICER'S ATTENTION

DETROIT, Nov. 12.—(UP)—Mrs. Anna Price rolled up the windows of her automobile to prevent traffic policemen from "tagging" her for double-parking. Then she drove her car into the officer's motorcycle, wrecking it and injuring its rider. Later, at headquarters she threw a summons at an officer's face, and left. Today officers reported the woman had looked herself in her apartment and refused entrance to police. A warrant may be the next official step.

MRS. SIMPSON TO LEAVE SOON FOR CONTINENT

King Edward's Friend May Remain From England For Six Months

AWAITS ABSOLUTE DECREE

London Scoffs at Report Friendship Cooling

LONDON, Nov. 12.—(UP)—Mrs. Wallis Simpson intends soon to leave for the continent, perhaps to remain there until her decree of divorce becomes absolute next spring, it was learned today.

She will stay on the Riviera with her friends Mr. and Mrs. Herman Rogers of New York, who were members of the party which, including Mrs. Simpson, the King entertained at Balmoral castle, Scotland, several weeks ago.

The plan of Mrs. Simpson to go abroad has been forming in her mind ever since she obtained a decree nisi of divorce from Ernest Simpson October 27. But it was a surprise that she might remain on the continent until the six months' period had expired—next April—when she may obtain an absolute divorce decree. The absolute decree is necessary before she can remarry.

King Busy

Mrs. Simpson's consideration of the possibility of a long stay coincides with an increase crowded engagement list for the King. He was at Portland today to inspect the fleet. He must go next week-end to visit distressed areas—in which, as in housing and slum clearance, he is deeply interested. Further, from now until his coronation next May he will be increasingly busy with details of arrangements for the ceremony, which he personally must approve.

Gossips seized at once on the intention of Mrs. Simpson to go abroad as a possible indication that her friendship with the King was waning. It was believed this gossip was inspired by persons who desire to end the friendship.

The King and Mrs. Simpson remain the closest of friends, and the King continues to say it with flowers. Loads of gardenias, carnations and shaggy chrysanthemums as big as one's head are delivered at Mrs. Simpson's house daily.

Further, since her divorce the King has taken every opportunity to see Mrs. Simpson if only for a few minutes, sometimes at Buckingham palace, sometimes at Cumberland Terrace, her home—but mostly at the homes of mutual friends.

There is no sign at all that the friendship is likely to cool.

Milli Monti played and sang the lead in "White Horse Inn" in one of the European countries and has just arrived in this country to star in the Rainbow Room in New York. This is her first appearance on the air here.

Dr. Wolfgang von Hagen recently returned from an exploring trip at the head waters of the Amazon and has an amazing story of life among the head hunters, whom he found quite friendly.

STAR WITH CROSBY

Early last Summer, Grete Steuckgold, of the Metropolitan Opera, sang a duet in the Music Hall broadcast with Bing Crosby and radio listeners all around the country applauded it as one of the novel musical features of the radio year. Tonight, Miss Steuckgold along with Edmund Lowe and Helen Vinson, of the films, comes back to the Music Hall for another guest-starring engagement.

The Music Hall broadcast over the NBC red network at 10 p. m. regularly presents Bing as the singing master of ceremonies and interrogator extraordinary of the guest stars, and Bob Burns, the Ozark raconteur who always carries a bazooka under his arm.

Edmund Lowe is best known for his characterization of Sergeant Quirk in "What Price Glory?" Recently both he and Miss Vinson have been making pictures in England but both have now returned to the Hollywood lots. Miss Vinson in private life is the wife of Fred Perry, world's No. 1 ranking tennis player.

Miss Steuckgold will sing at least one popular number in the Music Hall show. Rising to fame in opera, she has always kept up with the songs of the moment and likes to sing them in her concerts. More music by Jimmy Dorsey's orchestra and the Paul Taylor Chorus complete the lineup.

ELEPHANT HERD JUNGLE TERROR, TO BE HUNTED

JOHANNESBURG (UP)—The great herds of elephants in the Addo Bush, a large tract of jungle in South Africa, have become such pests and danger to life that Major Pretorius, big game hunter, has received permission from the authorities to destroy them.

So daring have the elephants become that farmers traveling from one homestead to another go in fear of their lives, and are generally well armed.

Recently two brothers, Baron and Martin Pienaar, were charged by a huge bull elephant while they were returning home from work. Baron managed to climb a tree. His brother, however, was caught by the leg, dashed to the ground and crushed to death by the elephant.

FAMED CLIMATE JOLTED IN PAST

SAN FRANCISCO (UP)—California, which regards its climate and other natural conditions as constituting almost a fountain of youth, has been somewhat shocked by the discovery of an early medical report on the state issued some 132 years ago.

The report was contrary to the modern conception of California by Californians and the climate took a terrible wallop.

The report was made by the valiant Don Jose Benites, surgeon of the tiny Presidio at Monterey and submitted to the Viceroy of New Spain. It is believed to be the first health report ever made for Upper California.

The report was found in the Mission of Santa Barbara.

The four cities of La Soledad, San Miguel, San Luis Obispo and San Francisco, which now attract health-seekers from far and wide, are mentioned in the ancient report as being badly in need of an aggressive health campaign.

While Don Benites laid some blame on the climate, he emphasized that the exposure of the Indians and the Spaniards to diseases of many sorts, the superstitious fear of ailing natives for both doctors and priests, bad food and bad water, were the chief factors in the somewhat unwholesome health picture.

He detailed one instance of a desperately ill native, who insisted on sitting on the damp floor and indulging a fierce appetite for chili and fried tripe, succumbing quickly thereafter because he spurned medicine and treatment.

The attempts of the mission fathers to hospitalize the sick seems to have succeeded only at San Luis Obispo. At least, Father Luis Martinez, according to the report, succeeded in getting 30 natives to enter the hospital.

CREW OF 320 MANS LARGEST WHALING SHIP

LONDON (UP)—The largest and most modern whaling factory in the world has left Spithead for the Antarctic.

It is known as the Terje Viken, and also is the largest tanker and has a greater freight-carrying capacity than any other vessel. When fully laden, the displacement is 43,000 tons. The fuel tank capacity is so great that the vessel could steam full speed for 18 months, covering a distance equal to six times round the world without calling at any port.

Capt. Gullik Jensen, master of the whaler, has a crew of 320.

Until March 7, the Terje Viken will operate from South Georgia. It will load fuel oil at Curacao, and at South Georgia will be joined by seven whale catchers, each of about 330 tons, which sailed from Norway recently.

The whale catchers will search for and shoot whales, using a harpoon with an explosive shell. Then the whales will be towed to the factory ship, and will be hauled tail first on board through a large hole in the stern of the ship. They will be cut up, and in the great boilers between decks the oil will be produced and stored.

HARRY DAY TO RETIRE

James Cahill, Chillicothe,
To Be Advisor

COLUMBUS, Nov. 12 — (UP) — State Treasurer-elect Clarence Knisley, who succeeds Harry S. Day of Fremont, on Jan. 11, today announced he would abolish the position of deputy treasurer now held by Ray Martin, of Cleveland.

The abolition of the position will result in an annual saving of $5,000. Martin has held the joint position of sales tax director and deputy treasurer.

Knisley said a change would be made in the entire personnel of the treasurer's office when he assumed the position and he would have sole and direct charge over all departments. He said he hoped to effect a 10 per cent cut in personnel by the abolition of other positions, some of them civil service positions.

The treasurer-elect also announced that Harry R. Shank, of Urbana, James A. Cahill, of Chillicothe, and Thomas Slack, of Dayton, would be named to positions on his staff in supervisory positions, working in the central office and the field.

CHURCHMEN ASK
FUND FOR PEACE

FORT WORTH, Tex. (UP) — The Seventh Day Adventists have joined other churches of the world in striving for peace in the face of threats of war.

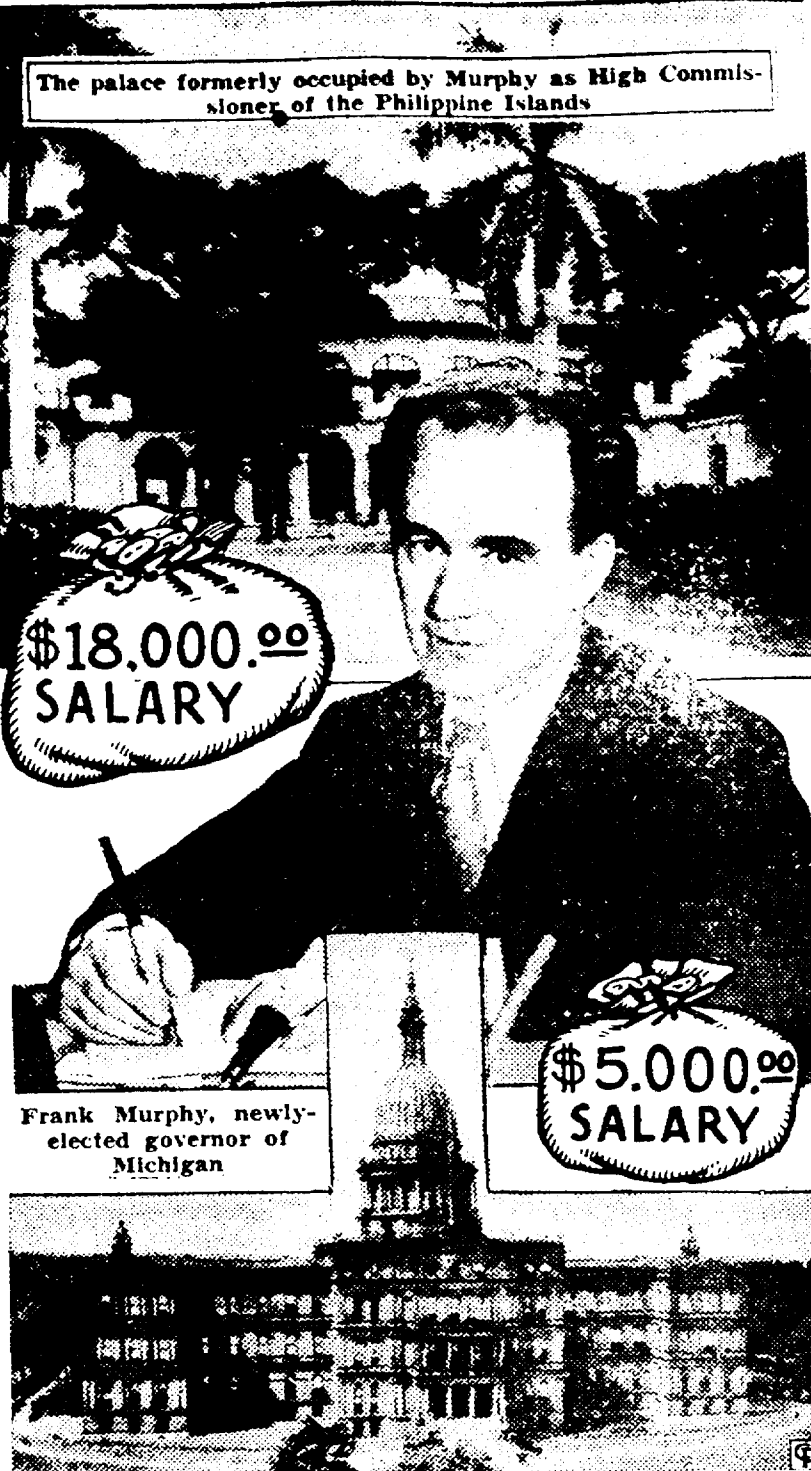

Delegations to that denomination's international convention at Fort Worth proposed a $4,000,000 "peace budget," largest in history to foster friendship throughout the world. Leaders of the faith from a hundred countries brought almost universal reports of the certainty of a conflict.

"War in Europe is inevitable," said A. V. Olson, delegate from Berne, Switzerland. His country, he said, is afraid of invasion for the first time in history.

"Both Italy and Germany have declared needs for more territory," he said. "Italy's gestures with Austria and Hungary are only a 'front' to pacify them during the acquisition of Albania and Yugoslavia."

FRANK MURPHY was elected governor of Michigan in the Democratic landslide, but he lost, too. The loss is a $13,000 a year difference in salary—the difference between the $18,000 he was paid as High Commissioner of the Philippine Islands, and the $5,000 he will receive as governor of Michigan. As an additional sacrifice, Murphy will have to forego two palaces and staffs of servants equal to those maintained by the White House, which went with his Philippine post, for a bachelor's apartment at Lansing. MOSCOW (UP) — Construction of battleships is being stressed in a program recently begun to bring the Soviet navy to "the level of its other armed forces," it is indicated by articles in the government press.

Heretofore Soviet naval construction has stressed submarines and fast cruisers, the navy relying on remodeled Tsarist craft for its heavier armament.

Za Industrializatsiu or Industrial Gazette, organ of the commissariat of heavy industry, recently printed a long technical article on the construction of modern battleships, reviewing all present types. The concluding paragraph of the article gave a clue to present Soviet naval construction. It read:

"The building of a battleship is in its way an examination of maturity for the technical thought and industrial power of the country."

Parvada, speaking for the all-powerful Communist party, in an editorial, previously revealed that the Soviet navy would be built up to level of other armed forces, significant in view of the fact that the Russian army and air force are the world's largest.

VOLTAGE RAYS
HOLD HOPE AS CANCER CHECK

Substitute For Radium Is Found Effective In Many Cases

CHICAGO. — (UP) — Scientists waging constant war against cancer have obtained another powerful weapon in the ultra-high voltage X-ray machine, according to Dr. Henry Schmitz, head of the Mercy Hospital Institute of Radiation Therapy.

The machine, built expressly to combat cancer, was installed for the first time in any hospital at the institute three years ago.

"Our records show that an increase of 24 per cent in survival rate one and a half years after treatment among patients treated with 800-kilovolt X-ray, over similar patients treated in 1914 with kilovolts," Dr. Schmitz said.

Percentage of Gain Rises
"Among our patients of 1914 the absolute curability rate, figured five years later, was 14.70 per cent. On the basis of present records this percentage should be between 35 and 40 in 1933, the first year we will be able to compare results of the new ultra-high voltage machine."

While the world waits for research to find some unfailing diagnosis of cancer in its early and easiest controlled stages, Dr. Schmitz and his associates, after 25 years study and practice of X-ray therapy, believe ultra-high voltage treatment the most economical and practical in nearly all cases.

Vast Voltage Developed
The ultra-high voltage machine at the Mercy Institute, first of five now in existence, cost about $50,000, not including the special building which houses it. Ninety thousand pounds of lead insulate the room which contains the huge tubes and target, capable of projecting 1,200,000 volts.

Its construction, Dr. Schmitz said, marked a long step forward in cancer treatment. "The machine provides the same quantity of radiation as $70,000,000 worth of radium — many times the world's supply," Dr. Schmitz explained. "There is not sufficient radium obtainable to meet present needs."

Greater Facilities Available
"We are able to treat 600 patients a year, and could treat double that number, thereby decreasing the cost of treatment, while a radium clinic necessarily administers to fewer."

"The technique of X-ray treatment is still in the experimental stage. We are constantly seeking improvements. It is the large, deep-seated and massive cancers that respond most satisfactorily to intense 800-kilovolt rays."

The public's part against cancer, second highest cause of death among women and third among men, Dr. Schmitz said, is biannual physical examinations.

YOSEMITE, Cal. (UP) — Tourist statistics for the Yosemite National Park show that during the year ending Sept. 30, 431,192 persons visited the park, an increase of 15.5 per cent over the year previous.

A total of 92,287 automobile permits were granted during the same time, exceeding all previous records by 7.4 per cent. Park revenues from this source alone were $184,656.

Visitors entering the park by buses showed a gain of 35 per cent over 1935, while railroads carried 3,481 passengers, a gain of 114 per cent over last year.

Automobiles from outside the state entering the park numbered 16,391, an increase of 30.7 per cent over 1935.

The automobile plates on cars entering the park represented every state and 13 territories and foreign nations. The first 10 leading states aside from California were Illinois, New York, Ohio, Texas, Washington, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Missouri, Oregon and Indiana.

During the winter sports season, from Dec. 1, 1935, to March 31, 1936, 47,904 persons visited the park, an increase of 6 per cent.

COOLER CYCLE
IN HAWAII SEEN

HONOLULU (UP) — A cycle of warm weather, lasting now for 30 years, is one of the principal factors in the increased growth of sugar cane that has made Hawaii wealthy, according to E. F. Loveridge, U. S. weather bureau official here.

Whatever progress the sugar planters have made in the way of scientific agriculture, Loveridge insists that this increased warmth on the islands has been one of the underlying causes of the present high production. He does not believe that the present cycle of warm weather, despite the fact that it has lasted now for 30 years, will be permanent.

"The territory has been going through an abnormal warm weather cycle since 1902 when something, perhaps a shift in the winds, occurred to change the temperature," Loveridge said. "The weather has been warmer during the past five years than it has been in the last 56 years. There has been an increase of two-tenths per cent in temperature."

As the average summer temperature in Hawaii is about 80 degrees, this increase is slight so far as the people are concerned. Loveridge explains. But it is all important to sugar cane farmers, especially since the increase has been greater in winter than in summer, making for a more even climate and one more suitable for the all-year growth of cane. An increase of one degree, from 74 to 75, means a 25 per cent increase in effective warmth for Hawaiian sugar cane, it is explained. Like cane grown in the United States, it will not thrive in a temperature registering under 72 degrees.

Loveridge is convinced that the warm weather of the past 30 years is due to a shift in the high pressure area several hundred miles off the coast of California. This shift, he said, could be held responsible for trade winds which formerly swept across the ocean to Hawaii from the cold north regions, now approaching from a more easterly direction. Coming from the east rather than from the north, they are warmer.

STARTING SHIPS ON WAYS GIVE U.S. PAR NAVY

Swanson's Report States
That Great Need is For Auxiliaries

WASHINGTON (UP)—The U. S. Navy made material progress towards full treaty strength navy in under-sea combatant vessels during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1936, Secretary of the Navy Claude A. Swanson states in his annual report.

The department pushed construction authorized by the Vincent-Trammell Act, and obtained funds through naval appropriations for construction necessary in 1937 to continue the replacement building program. A total of 79 naval vessels was under construction at the close of the fiscal year, and since then contracts have been awarded for construction of an additional 18 vessels, bringing the present total to 97.

With construction of fighting ships adequately cared for, Swanson said, the next urgent need to authorization for a fleet of modern auxiliary vessels. No appropriations have been made, to date, for construction of this type ship.

Lacks Auxiliary Ships
"In time of war the vast auxiliary service which would be essential to the proper support of the fleet would be formed mostly from merchant marine ships, of the appropriate types," the report said.

"These are, however, not available for the supply and servicing of the peacetime fleet. Nor can they in time of war replace certain types of auxiliary vessels which, due to the specialized nature of the services they render, must be of special design and must have the necessary speed and endurance to accompany fleet movements."

"Most of the present auxiliary vessels of the fleet are old and deficient in the characteristics required for giving completely effective peacetime service and for performing wartime functions for which substitutes will not serve."

Modern Replacements Needed

"It is urgently necessary to replace with modern vessels those which are now old and unfit and to add a moderate number of new ships of specialized types. It is hoped that authorization may soon be given for the accomplishment of an orderly plan having this end in view."

During the fiscal year the United States fleet operated a total of 491 naval vessels at sea, and the Navy had on hand on June 30, 1936, a total of 977 airplanes. Approximately 483 of these planes participated in the annual maneuvers held off the west coast of Central America during April and May.

MODERN PUPILS BRIGHTER, SAYS TEACHER AT 70

PITTSBURGH (UP)—After 50 years' experience as a school teacher, Prof. E. E. Boyd has come to the conclusion that modern students are brighter and better informed, "even though they don't take their studying so seriously."

Boyd, 70, who was among teachers in the Pittsburgh district retired recently by the state school retirement board, believes radio programs and motion pictures have improved so much in the past few years that children can draw a wealth of broadening knowledge from them.

The old-time teacher agrees that psychology has its place in the classroom, but that an old-fashioned spanking isn't altogether out of place, either.

"Trouble is nowadays, in some schools, the teachers and principals are afraid to look across at a child."

"That wasn't my theory. Try kindness, be tactful and patient with the problem pupil, but if worse comes to worst, have the courage to give the spanking."

In McKeesport, Pa., where Boyd was a teacher in the night schools, he even had several encounters with adult students.

"They've even come at me with knives and pistols," he said. "But usually, I was able to get their interest and attention so they forgot mischief-making and were interested in learning."

HOSPITAL PLAN TO AID CHICAGO

CHICAGO (UP)—Chicago soon will have a group hospitalization plan in operation which will insure a maximum of 21 days hospitalization to all gainfully employed persons and their dependents for a small sum—perhaps $10—a year.

Detailed announcement of the plan came nearly a year after formation of the Chicago Hospital Council, headed by Charles H. Schweppe, industrialist and president of St. Luke's hospital.

A charter was issued by the secretary of state, under a special enabling act passed by the legislature a year ago, for the Hospital Service Corporation, which will operate the Plan for Hospital Care, the name selected for the project.

Medical Services Excluded
The plan is designed to provide all usual hospital services, including board and room, general nursing service, anaesthetic, ordinary drugs, medications and dressings, and necessary pathological and laboratory services, but will not include medical services.

"The relationship between physician and patient remains unchanged under the plan, Schweppe explained. "We have spent six months studying low cost hospital service plans in operation in other cities of the United States. The committee has developed a plan so favorably received here that funds sufficient to warrant the immediate launching of the Plan for Hospital Care have been subscribed."

Hospitals to Exceed 30
More than 30 hospitals in Chicago will participate. Incorporators are Schweppe, A. C. Bachmeyer, director of University of Chicago clinics; the Rev. John W. Barrett, diocesan director of Catholic hospitals; Dr. Irving S. Cutler, dean of the Northwestern medical school and superintendent of Passavant hospital; J. Dewey Lutes, superintendent of Ravenswood hospital; Albert C. Meyer, president of Michael Reese hospital and Taylor Strawn, president of Grant Hospital.

The subscriber will have a choice of hospitals and the service may be used in one or more admissions to the hospital. The corporation will pay for all services for employed persons held a full coverage policy and will pay half of the hospital bill for dependents holding a half coverage policy.

WEATHER DATA EXPLORED FOR DROUGHT CAUSE

WPA Force to Condense
15 Tons of Records into
200 Charts

NEW ORLEANS (UP)—A clue to nature's secret, the cause of major droughts, wet periods and floods, is being sought by 225 WPA "white collar" workers, under the direction of W. F. McDonald, chief of the U. S. weather bureau at New Orleans.

The project has been completed as to the compilation of 5,000,000 weather observations by ships in all oceans during the past 50 years—15 tons of records, most of it on aging, yellow paper.

While many foreign countries and ships contributed to the vast collection, and will benefit by the summary, New Orleans is the only place in the world where such a compilation is being made, McDonald said.

Marine Weather Expert

MacDonald for five years was in charge of the marine division of the weather bureau in Washington. About a year ago he was placed in charge of the New Orleans office. A short time later, with the aid of WPA, the work was started. The aging records that had lain in dusty storerooms in Washington were shipped to New Orleans.

For months past, the workers have poured over the individual weather reports. McDonald says that he can't make undue promises, but he did say that the projects results "supplement and advance our substratum of knowledge of oceanic weather and should be of immense benefit in future trans-oceanic air travel."

The condensed material will show in 200 charts. Sections of the various oceans of the world were blocked off and weather reports from ships plying these sections for the past 50 years were compiled, to give an accurate picture of what has happened in the areas. Studies were made of these "past performances" in order to judge the future.

"We had ship reports from the seven seas," McDonald said. "We covered all oceans, not only the Atlantic and Pacific. Ocean weather—and, of course, the results of this study—is of international interest. Countries that contributed to the study will gain by the help they have given us."

Now that the oceanic weather has been charted, the workers are going back over the records, studying "departures" from normal weather, rainfall and other phenomenon. These will be checked against rainfall records that are being sent in from all Louisiana weather observation stations.

The records also will be checked against rainfall statistics that ultimately will be received from all of the bureau's 5,000 stations throughout the United States.

In addition to rainfall, drought and flood records are to be checked against the oceanic material. Rainfall in the United States comes from the ocean, McDonald explained, and the relation between the two weather conditions—at land and sea—may help explain the causes of droughts in the Middle West, and floods and heavy, long rainfalls in other sections of the country.

It may, too, unlock the door to long-range forecasting. The prediction of weather by weeks, months, even seasons is the vision of the weather bureau.

"But," MacDonald repeated, "we can promise nothing."

WOMAN AT 68 STUDIES A B C'S TO READ NEWS

PITTSBURGH (UP)—Mrs. Elizabeth Mazanin, 68-year-old Munhall woman, is studying her ABC's nowadays as she is learning to read and write.

Two nights each week she goes down the hill from her home to the Munhall neighborhood house. There with a group of students, mostly immigrant y'chs, she ponders over the alphabet and her first grade reader. It is a little difficult, she admits, to guide a pencil with her hands that are gnarled from years of household labor. And it is even more difficult for her age-dimmed eyes to make out the letters of the primer.

But, despite the handicaps, Mrs. Mazanin is as enthusiastic and determined to succeed as any 6-year-old child.

A native of the Old World, she came to America 30 years ago. She has been unable since that time to read and write.

"And that's long enough, too,"

she said through an interpreter. "Just think, all this time, I've never been able to write a letter or read a paper. About the only thing I can do is to follow my prayerbook at church, and that's because I've memorized it."

"I get tired of looking at the pictures in the papers—I want to read the news."

FIGHTING SHIPS ON WAYS GIVE U.S. PAR NAVY

Swanson's Report States That Great Need is For Auxiliaries

WASHINGTON — (UP) — The U. S. Navy made material progress towards full treaty strength navy in under-sea combatant vessels during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1936, Secretary of the Navy Claude A. Swanson states in his annual report.

The department pushed construction authorized by the Vincent-Trammell Act, and obtained funds through naval appropriations for construction necessary in 1937 to continue the replacement building program. A total of 79 naval vessels was under construction at the close of the fiscal year, and since then contracts have been awarded for construction of an additional 18 vessels, bringing the present total to 97.

With construction of fighting ships adequately cared for, Swanson said, the next urgent need to authorization for a fleet of modern auxiliary vessels. No appropriations have been made, to date, for construction of this type ship.

Lacks Auxiliary Ships
"In time of war the vast auxiliary service which would be essential to the proper support of the fleet would be formed mostly from merchant marine ships of the appropriate types," the report said.

"These are, however, not available for the supply and servicing of the peacetime fleet. Nor can they in time of war replace certain types of auxiliary vessels which, due to the specialized nature of the services they render, must be of special design and must have the necessary speed and endurance to accompany fleet movements."

"Most of the present auxiliary vessels of the fleet are old and deficient in the characteristics required for giving completely effective peacetime service and for performing wartime functions for which substitutes will not serve."

Modern Replacements Needed
"It is urgently necessary to replace with modern vessels those which are now old and unfit and to add a moderate number of new ships of specialized types. It is hoped that authorization may soon be given for the accomplishment of an orderly plan having this end in view."

During the fiscal year the United States fleet operated a total of 491 naval vessels at sea, and the Navy had on hand on June 30, 1936, a total of 977 airplanes. Approximately 483 of these planes participated in the annual maneuvers held off the west coast of Central America during April and May.

MODERN PUPILS BRIGHTER, SAYS TEACHER AT 70

PITTSBURGH (UP)—After 50 years' experience as a school teacher, Prof. E. E. Boyd has come to the conclusion that modern students are brighter and better informed, "even though they don't take their studying so seriously."

Boyd, 70, who was among teachers in the Pittsburgh district retired recently by the state school retirement board, believes radio programs and motion pictures have improved so much in the past few years that children can draw a wealth of broadening knowledge from them.

The old-time teacher agrees that psychology has its place in the classroom, but that an old-fashioned spanking isn't altogether out of place, either.

"Trouble is nowadays, in some schools, the teachers and principals are afraid to look cross at a child."

"That wasn't my theory. Try kindness, be tactful and patient with the problem pupil, but if worse comes to worst, have the courage to give the spanking."

In McKeesport, Pa., where Boyd was a teacher in the night schools, he even had several encounters with adult students.

"They've even come at me with knives and pistols," he said. "But usually, I was able to get their interest and attention so they forgot mischief-making and were interested in learning."

HOSPITAL PLAN TO AID CHICAGO

CHICAGO (UP)—Chicago soon will have a group hospitalization plan in operation which will insure a maximum of 21 days hospitalization to all gainfully employed persons and their dependents for a small sum—perhaps $10—a year.

Detailed announcement of the plan came nearly a year after formation of the Chicago Hospital Council, headed by Charles H. Schweppe, industrialist and president of St. Luke's hospital.

A charter was issued by the secretary of state, under a special enabling act passed by the legislature a year ago, for the Hospital Service Corporation, which will operate the Plan for Hospital Care, the name selected for the project.

Medical Services Excluded
The plan is designed to provide all usual hospital services, including board and room, general nursing service, anaesthetic, ordinary drugs, medications and dressings, and necessary pathological and laboratory services, but will not include medical services.

"The relationship between physician and patient remains unchanged under the plan, Schweppe explained. "We have spent six months studying low cost hospital service plans in operation in other cities of the United States. The committee has developed a plan so favorably received here that funds sufficient to warrant the immediate launching of the Plan for Hospital Care have been subscribed."

Hospitals to Exceed 30
More than 30 hospitals in Chicago will participate. Incorporators are Schweppe, A. C. Bachmeyer, director of University of Chicago clinics; the Rev. John W. Barrett, diocesan director of Catholic hospitals; Dr. Irving S. Custer, dean of the Northwestern medical school and superintendent of Passavant hospital; J. Dewey Lutes, superintendent of Ravenswood hospital; Albert C. Meyer, president of Michael Reese hospital and Taylor Strawn, president of Grant Hospital.

The subscriber will have a choice of hospitals and the service may be used in one or more admissions to the hospital.

The corporation will pay for all services for employed persons hold a full coverage policy and will pay half of the hospital bill for dependents holding a half coverage policy.

Mrs. C. H. Lundblad, Paynesville, Minn., president of the Hay Fever Club of America, said Duluth was selected for the meeting because of its freedom from pollen and dust particles so hard on "hayfevers."

Physicians and scientists will be invited to discuss their progress in combating the ailment, Mrs. Lundblad said.

Delegates may ask state and federal laws calling for imprisonment of farmers and property owners failing to destroy noxious weeds.

STATE OPPOSES NEW PLANT LAW

SACRAMENTO, Cal. (UP)—California's department of agriculture will fight any attempt to modify the state's border inspection service by means of which agriculture is protected from plant and insect pests from other districts.

Reports that organizations interested particularly in tourist travel indicate a fight will be made before the next state legislature to modify the quarantine inspection laws.

A. C. Fleury, chief of the bureau of plant quarantine, said that modified systems had been tried in the past and insisted they would not work.

"If any modification is made the whole thing might as well be given up, because the objective of the quarantine stations would be destroyed," Fleury said.

Fleury denied that quarantine inspection had affected seriously the influx of visitors to the state. He said:

"Tourist travel has increased every year since control was made effective. The summer of 1936 saw 20 per cent more travelers entering California than the previous summer."

State officials explained that too many persons misunderstand that there is a long list of pests, not just those brought in by fruit, and that it was unlikely the legislature would let down the bars on an important law protecting one of the state's major industries.

PASTORS BRING FORD'S BAN ON SLOT MACHINES

Mayor and Safety Chief Say
They Will Not Return
After Conference

CHIEF ROUT ACTIVE, TOO

Efforts Being Made to End
All Chillicothe Vice

CHILLICOTHE, Nov. 12.—Mayor James E. Ford and Safety Director Sam Segal made a statement Thursday to the effect that the return of slot machines to Chillicothe will not be tolerated.

It was also learned that The Ross County Ministerial Association as a group will issue a statement commending the mayor and safety director on their stand.

Rev. A. J. Kestle, president of the county ministerial association, said after the meeting in the mayor's office, that the association would investigate conditions in the county in regard to slot machines and confer at a later date with Sheriff Joseph Vincent.

"We are satisfied that the city will not permit slot machines," Rev. Kestle said. "We will have to investigate rumors that the machines are being used in the county before making any statement or conferring with the sheriff."

Meanwhile, other developments in the situation came Tuesday evening following a resolution passed by the Kiwanis Club Tuesday.

Jay-Cees Oppose Machines

The Junior Chamber of Commerce at a meeting Tuesday night authorized its board of directors to draft a letter or resolution to be sent to Mayor Ford and Sheriff Joseph Vincent, urging that action be taken to remove or keep slot machines out of both Chillicothe and Ross county.

At another Tuesday night meeting, the congregation of the First United Brethren church on East Main street passed a resolution which will be submitted to Mayor Ford by the pastor, Rev. W. L. Kuhen. This resolution read:

"Resolved, that the slot machine is a gambling device, a nuisance and a liability to our community. We enter our protest against its return and ask the proper authorities to take action against its reinstatement."

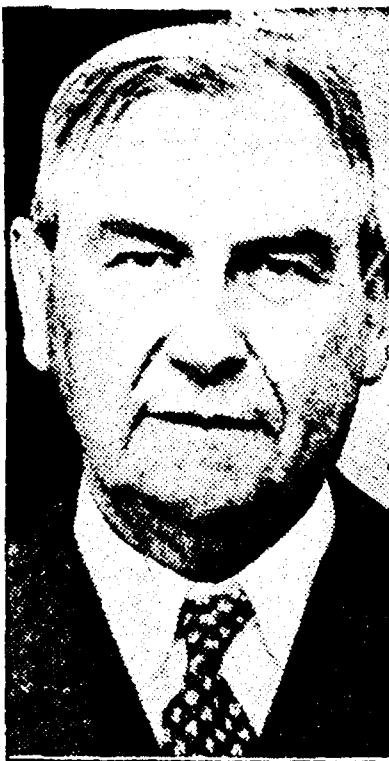

Director, Chief Opposes "Slots"

Director Segal and Police Chief Ben Root Wednesday stoutly affirmed the declaration that slot machines are out to stay, as far as they are concerned. Segal said he would fight them to the last ditch and that if, at any time, his stand on the matter was not in line with that of higher officials, he would fight until relieved of his post.

Both officials went further in declaring that every effort is being made to stamp out vice of all kinds in the city, and Director Segal promised that if any citizen could show any instances of crime or vice, immediate steps would be taken to have the situation cleaned up.

Chief Root believes that Chillicothe is cleaner now than at any time in the past 20 or 25 years and said that as far as slot machines are concerned he doesn't believe that they will ever "come back."

MIAMI BUILDING AT 10-YEAR HIGH

MIAMI, Fla. (UP)—The Miami area is enjoying the biggest wave of building since 1925 in preparation for an anticipated influx of 2,500,000 visitors. Addition of approximately 6,000 housing units to accommodate tourists is revealed in a survey by J. B. Sullivan, Florida hotel commissioner.

More than 100 new apartment houses and 33 new hotels are included in the building permits issued since last April in Dade county, embracing the City of Miami and several surrounding communities, according to Sullivan. His survey shows the new apartment houses account for approximately 3,000 rooms, while the construction of residential and de luxe hotels adds an additional 2,500 units.

"The fanfare accompanying the 1925-26 Florida boom is absent from this constructive increase in building," Sullivan said. "Nevertheless, the records of the Miami building department show that the wave of residential building construction in the district since the first of the year exceeds in volume that of the first eight months of 1925."

"A total of $5,644,878 was spent on residential construction in Miami during the first three-quarters of the year in Miami Beach, linked to Miami by two causeways across Biscayne Bay, building expenditures in the same period amounted to $2,397,310."

Completion of a schedule of major sports events and special entertainment features in the Miami area are believed to assure the longest winter season here to date.

PASTORS BRING FORD'S BAN ON SLOT MACHINES

Mayor and Safety Chief Say
They Will Not Return
After Conference

CHIEF ROUT ACTIVE, TOO

Efforts Being Made to End
All Chillicothe Vice

CHILLICOTHE, Nov. 12.—Mayor James E. Ford and Safety Director Sam Segal made a statement Thursday to the effect that the return of slot machines to Chillicothe will not be tolerated.

It was also learned that the Ross County Ministerial Association as a group will issue a statement commending the mayor and safety director on their stand.

Rev. A. J. Kestle, president of the county ministerial association, said after the meeting in the mayor's office, that the association would investigate conditions in the county in regard to slot machines and confer at a later date with Sheriff Joseph Vincent.

"We are satisfied that the city will not permit slot machines," Rev. Kestle said. "We will have to investigate rumors that the machines are being used in the county before making any statement or conferring with the sheriff."

Meanwhile, other developments in the situation came Tuesday evening following a resolution passed by the Kiwanis Club Tuesday.

Jay-Cees Oppose Machines

The Junior Chamber of Commerce at a meeting Tuesday night authorized its board of directors to draft a letter or resolution to be sent to Mayor Ford and Sheriff Joseph Vincent, urging that action be taken to remove or keep slot machines out of both Chillicothe and Ross county.

At another Tuesday night meeting, the congregation of the First United Brethren church on East Main street passed a resolution which will be submitted to Mayor Ford by the pastor, Rev. W. L. Kuhen. This resolution read:

"Resolved, that the slot machine is a gambling device, a nuisance and a liability to our community. We enter our protest against its return and ask the proper authorities to take action against its reinstatement."

Director, Chief Opposes "Slots"

Director Segal and Police Chief Ben Rout Wednesday stoutly affirmed the declaration that slot machines are out to stay, as far as they are concerned. Segal said he would fight them to the last ditch and that if, at any time, his stand on the matter was not in line with that of higher officials, he would fight until relieved of his post.

Both officials went further in declaring that every effort is being made to stamp out vice of all kinds in the city, and Director Segal promised that if any citizen could show any instances of crime or vice, immediate steps would be taken to have the situation cleaned up.

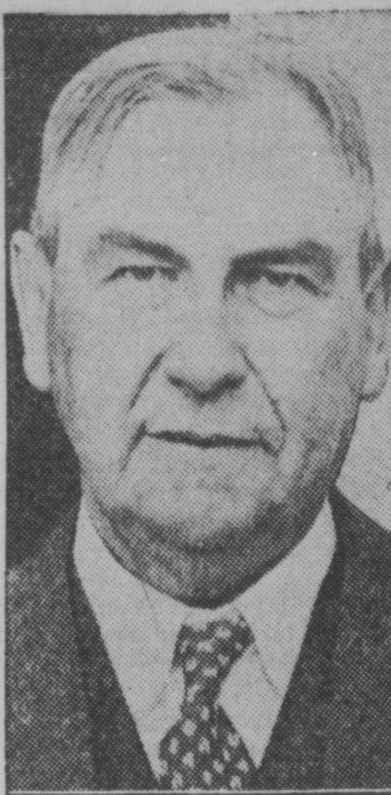

Chief Rout believes that Chillicothe is cleaner now than at any time in the past 20 or 25 years and said that as far as slot machines are concerned he doesn't believe that they will ever "come back."

MIAMI BUILDING AT 10-YEAR HIGH

MIAMI, Fla. (UP)—The Miami era is enjoying the biggest wave of building since 1925 in preparation for an anticipated influx of 2,500,000 visitors. Addition of approximately 6,000 housing units to accommodate tourists is revealed in a survey by J. B. Sullivan, Florida hotel commissioner.

More than 100 new apartment houses and 33 new hotels are included in the building permits issued since last April in Dade county, embracing the City of Miami and several surrounding communities, according to Sullivan. His survey shows the new apartment houses account for approximately 3,000 rooms, while the construction of residential and de luxe hotels adds an additional 2,500 units.

"The fanfare accompanying the 1925-26 Florida boom is absent from this constructive increase in building," Sullivan said. "Nevertheless, the records of the Miami building department show that the wave of residential building construction in the district since the first of the year exceeds in volume that of the first eight months of 1925."

"A total of $5,644,878 was spent on residential construction in Miami during the first three-quarters of the year in Miami Beach, linked to Miami by two causeways across Biscayne Bay, building expenditures in the same period amounted to $2,397,310."

Completion of a schedule of major sports events and special entertainment features in the Miami area are believed to assure the longest winter season here to date.

LIQUOR SALES SKIRT THE LAW

LONDON (UP)—Gerald O'Brien, London hotel keeper, is selling liquor at all hours of the day and night, in direct defiance of the licensing law, and authorities are unable to stop him. O'Brien is the originator of the "bottle party" method of legally selling drinks after hours. Although London bars and restaurants may only sell intoxicating liquor between the hours of 11 A. M. and 3 P. M., and 5 P. M. and midnight, to give the extreme limits, O'Brien has opened a bar at which customers may drink openly all around the clock.

This is how it is done: Orders on Credit. A customer goes into the bar and orders—on credit—two gallons of whisky, or gin or brandy, as the case may be. The customer fills in a form to that effect, but takes delivery of only 1-19th of the total order. It is served up in what looks like a medicine bottle with the customer's name on the label. On the form is an authorization for the resale of what is left of the two gallons, if not claimed within 12 hours.

"This hotel is unlicensed," explains O'Brien. "We have taken out a refreshment house license, obtainable by anyone. Then, in the coal cellar, with a separate entrance to the street, we have opened a wine-and-spirit store with an off-license—also easily obtainable. Called Within the Law. "Two gallons is the minimum quantity that legally constitutes a wholesale order. To deliver any part of it, at any time, is within the law. I got that legal opinion from a barrister. "The spirits not consumed is sold and the proceeds credited to the customer. So long as there are two gallons standing to the credit of every customer in the bar, we are not breaking the law. We shall therefore be open all night, every night and on Sunday afternoons."

The next jury trial in common pleas court is scheduled for Nov. 18. Clarence Brungs, city, will go on trial at that time on a burglary and larceny charge involving the theft of 62 pounds of chickens.

U. S. FORESEEN AS CROP RIVAL OF MANCHUKUO

Two Countries May Bid For World Market in Soybeans

SAN FRANCISCO — (UP) —

The economic stability of Manchukuo, and with it an adequate return on Japan's huge investment depends largely on America's attitude toward the soybeans, according to a research and investigation just completed by the Institute of Pacific Relations.

If the United States, which is beginning an ever increasing production of soybeans, manages to consume them all or develops new outlets for their use, instead of invading the foreign market, Manchukuo and Japanese capital may thrive, says the report. But if the production in the United States continues to develop as it has in the past few years, and if foreign markets are entered, Manchukuo may find its economic equilibrium greatly threatened and with it that of the Japanese investment there.

Vital Monopoly Held. Up to now Manchukuo has had a dominating position both in the production and exportation of soybeans. Approximately 75 per cent of the world crop is grown there and the export trade has been a virtual monopoly. This export is said to be one of the commercial reasons for construction of the Southern Manchuria Railway and the operation of this on a profitable basis apparently depends largely upon Manchukuo maintaining its world-wide dominance in the soybean market.

But within the past few years, production of the soybean in the United States has begun to assume large proportions. American production doubled in 1935-36 and amounted to 94,191,000 pounds, of which 42,700 metric tons went into the export trade.

To date, this has not constituted a serious threat to Manchukuo's foreign trade, for in 1935 it exported in soybeans, bean cake and bean oil a total of 2,849,200 tons at a value of approximately $60,000,000.

U. S. Crop Used At Home. Manchukuo's foreign markets have been saved largely from American competition by the fact that the American crop is being used largely at home, the research indicated. However, it is pointed out that American production is capable of great expansion, especially in the Middle West. The United States, with its mechanized system of agriculture, can produce soybeans only at about the same price as the cheap agricultural labor in Manchukuo.

The decrease in exportations since the peak years of 1929 to 1933 is attributed largely to the fact that Manchukuo is losing both the Japanese and Chinese markets, rather than to any increase in production in and exportation from the United States and other countries where the soybean is gaining a foothold as a valuable crop.

Closing of the Chinese market occurred in 1931 partly as the result of a retaliatory measure by the Chinese against Japanese products and partly by customs barriers. Loss of the Japanese market despite Japan's vast financial investment in Manchukuo is attributed to the fact that in recent years, Japan's industrial interests have made great advances in producing chemical fertilizers that replace the soybean cake formerly used. This not only enables Japan to become self-sufficient from the standpoint of fertilizers for domestic needs but induces it to place domestic chemical fertilizers in foreign markets instead of pushing the sale of Manchukuo soybean cakes.

LIQUOR SALES SKIRT THE LAW

LONDON (UP)—Gerald O'Brien, London hotel keeper, is selling liquor at all hours of the day and night, in direct defiance of the licensing law, and authorities are unable to stop him.

O'Brien is the originator of the "bottle party" method of legally selling drinks after hours. Although London bars and restaurants may only sell intoxicating liquor between the hours of 11 A. M. and 3 P. M., and 5 P. M. and midnight, to give the extreme limits, O'Brien has opened a bar at which customers may drink openly all around the clock.

This is how it is done:

Orders On Credit
A customer goes into the bar and orders—on credit—two gallons of whisky, or gin or brandy, as the case may be. The customer fills in a form to that effect, but takes delivery of only 1-19th of the total order. It is served up in what looks like a medicine bottle with the customer's name on the label. On the form is an authorization for the resale of what is left of the two gallons, if not claimed within 12 hours.

"This hotel is unlicensed," explains O'Brien. "We have taken out a refreshment house license, obtainable by anyone. Then, in the coal cellar, with a separate entrance to the street, we have opened a wine-and-spirit store with an off-license—also easily obtainable."

Called Within the Law
"Two gallons is the minimum quantity that legally constitutes a wholesale order. To deliver any part of it, at any time, is within the law. I got that legal opinion from a barrister."

"The spirits not consumed is sold and the proceeds credited to the customer. So long as there are two gallons standing to the credit of every customer in the bar, we are not breaking the law. We shall therefore be open all night, every night and on Sunday afternoons."

The next jury trial in common pleas court is scheduled for Nov. 18. Clarence Brungs, city, will go on trial at that time on a burglary and larceny charge involving the theft of 62 pounds of chickens

U. S. FORESEEN AS CROP RIVAL OF MANCHUKUO

Two Countries May Bid For World Market in Soybeans

SAN FRANCISCO — (UP) —

The economic stability of Manchukuo, and with it an adequate return on Japan's huge investment depends largely on America's attitude toward the soybeans, according to a research and investigation just completed by the Institute of Pacific Relations.

If the United States, which is beginning an ever increasing production of soybeans, manages to consume them all or develops new outlets for their use, instead of invading the foreign market, Manchukuo and Japanese capital may thrive, says the report. But if the production in the United States continues to develop as it has in the past few years, and if foreign markets are entered Manchukuo may find its economic equilibrium greatly threatened and with it that of the Japanese investment there.

To date, this has not constituted a serious threat to Manchukuo's foreign trade, for in 1935 it exported in soybeans, bean cake and bean oil a total of 2,849,200 tons at a value of approximately $60,000,000.

U. S. Crop Used At Home

Manchukuo's foreign markets have been saved largely from American competition by the fact that the American crop is being used largely at home, the research indicated. However, it is pointed out that American production is capable of great expansion, especially in the Middle West. The United States, with its mechanized system of agriculture, can produce soybeans only at about the same price as the cheap agricultural labor in Manchukuo.

ECONOMISTS EXPRESS OPTIMISM OVER OHIO'S FARM OUTLOOK FOR

RISE IN PRICES, WORK IN CITIES MAJOR FACTORS

More Buildings Repaired in 1936 Than in Last 5-Year Period

BUTTER OFFERS CLIMB

Feed Grain Supply Far Less Than Normal Figure

COLUMBUS, Nov. 12.—Optimism prevails in the interpretation of the agricultural outlook for 1937 prepared by the rural economics department, Ohio State University, from material gathered by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, Washington, D. C.

The cheerful viewpoint is based on two principal factors, increased prosperity in cities which enables consumers to buy more farm products and a consequent rise in the prices farmers get for their produce. There is a good prospect that the "national income paid out" will be 66 billions in 1937 as compared to 45 billions in 1933.

Farming as well as other industries must obtain its income from the billions spent each year by the American people, and an increase of nearly 50 per cent in "income paid out" means that farm products will receive their share of prosperity. Ohio farm products are now selling for a little above parity prices, so farmers can buy a trifle more goods with a unit amount of crops or livestock than they could in the period 1910-1914.

Shown in Purchases

Ohio State economists say that the evidence of better farm conditions is already shown in purchases made by farmers in 1936. New rural consumers of electricity in the state will total more than 11,000 and an even greater number is expected to add electric service in 1937. More farm buildings were erected or remodelled in the state in 1936 than in the whole period 1930-1935.

High cost of feeds which Ohio farmers must buy to fatten livestock have tended to reduce interest in this branch of farming. The numbers of both hogs and cattle are expected to decrease until there is a more favorable ratio between feed and meat prices. Sheep and lambs are more plentiful than last year because a larger proportion of the lamb crop was saved. Horses and mules continue to decline in numbers.

Butter prices are up and no drop is expected before pasture season next spring. The number of milk cows per 100 people in the United States is the lowest since 1931.

DRIVE STARTS FOR STANDARD AVIATION LAWS

ST. LOUIS (UP)—An effort to obtain uniform state and municipal aeronautic legislation, and to stimulate the air marking of cities and highways, will be made this fall by the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce.

The Architect, John Quincy Adams, had a very nice perspective drawing of the new school building in last Sunday's Columbus Dispatch. It is only a little more than two weeks until work on the project should be started

ECONOMISTS EXPRESS OPTIMISM OVER OHIO'S FARM OUTLOOK FOR 1937

RISE IN PRICES,
WORK IN CITIES
MAJOR FACTORS

More Buildings Repaired in 1936 Than in Last
5-year Period

BUTTER OFFERS CLIMB

Feed Grain Supply Far Less Than Normal Figure

COLUMBUS, Nov. 12—Optimism prevails in the interpretation of the agricultural outlook for 1937 prepared by the rural economics department, Ohio State University, from material gathered by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, Washington, D. C.

The cheerful viewpoint is based on two principal factors, increased prosperity in cities which enables consumers to buy more farm products and a consequent rise in the prices farmers get for their produce. There is a good prospect that the "national income paid out" will be 66 billions in 1937 as compared to 45 billions in 1935.

Farming as well as other industries must obtain its income from the billions spent each year by the American people, and an increase of nearly 50 per cent in "income paid out" means that farm products will receive their share of prosperity. Ohio farm products are now selling for a little above parity prices, so farmers can buy a trifle more goods with a unit amount of crops or livestock than they could in the period 1910-1914.

Shown in Purchases

Ohio State economists say that the evidence of better farm conditions is already shown in purchases made by farmers in 1936. New rural consumers of electricity in the state will total more than 11,000 and an even greater number is expected to add electric service in 1937. More farm buildings were erected or remodelled in the state in 1936 than in the whole period 1930-1935.

High cost of feeds which Ohio farmers must buy to fatten livestock have tended to reduce interest in this branch of farming. The numbers of both hogs and cattle are expected to decrease until there is a more favorable ratio between feed and meat prices. Sheep and lambs are more plentiful than last year because a larger proportion of the lamb crop was saved. Horses and mules continue to decline in numbers.

Butter prices are up and no drop is expected before pasture season next spring. The number of milk cows per 100 people in the United States is the lowest since 1931.

Egg production is down because high-priced feeds caused the marketing of many producing birds. Storage holdings of poultry on October 1, 1936 were the largest on record.

The total supply of feed grains available this winter is one-fourth less than normal. Grain and hay prices are likely to continue high until new crops are harvested. The acreage of barley and oats planted next spring probably will be above average because farmers will attempt to produce quantities of feed grain as soon as possible.

World surpluses of wheat have been used and the 1937 wheat crop is expected to be as large as that of 1936, which was the second largest on record. Normal wheat yields will put the United States wheat crop on an export basis.

Supplies of clover and alfalfa seed are one-third less than normal. The drought reduced production and the carryover of old seed was below average. Imports are expected to be large and Ohio farmers are urged to be sure that foreign seed is adapted for use in this state before it is purchased.

Potatoes Crop Small

The potato crop is the smallest in 10 years but the Ohio farm price for this crop on October 15 was the highest since 1930. All indications point to continued high prices.

THE NEXT WAR

CERTAIN visionaries who write for a living have their own ideas about the dreary subject of the next war—just what manner of an affair it will be, how it will be fought and how won. War as the world has known it in the past, they say, is gone forever. In the future the slaughter will be scientific business in which airplanes will be used extensively, sending forth great clouds of deadly gas to exterminate cities and towns. Death rays will wither multitudes, like leaves falling at the north wind's breath. The devil's brew will come from laboratories and will be scattered upon the just and the unjust.

It is rather significant, however, that old soldiers are skeptical. The opinion of Major General Frank Parker, expressed by others before him, commands attention as he lays aside the uniform he has worn for forty-six years, always with distinction and honor. Wars, General Parker says, begin in the mud and end in the mud, and it will always be so, regardless of the innovations which time and science bring.

There is substance for this conviction. Wars are won by taking and holding territory, a task which cannot be accomplished by fliers or by scientists. The job belongs to the doughboy, who must fight his way across the battered terrain in the face of shells and bullets, gas and fire, climbing in and out of shell holes, struggling through wire, all for the possession of a muddy, bloody trench.

"The load will be carried by the infantry-artillery combination as in the past," General Parker says. "Plans cannot capture territory nor defend it." Fundamentally, war today is just about the same as when Caesar clashed with Vercingetorix. It is the business of marching men and involves the taking and holding of a piece of earth.

How Getting Angry Makes People Old

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

I DID NOT see much of my old friend, Dr. Adrian Gibbs, during the election campaign. When I did, he showed no disposition to discuss, although I would have liked an expression from him, even in terms of that placid calm which characterizes most of his utterances. Now that it is all over, he broke his silence, the other evening.

"You know this business of people dying by the side of the radio when they hear one of Al Smith's speeches, which I read about a few weeks ago before the dreadful decision had been made, ought to be an awful lesson to the rest of us."

"Do you think that one of Al Smith's speeches is worth dying over?"

"Prize fights, too, and the world series—somebody died at the Joe Louis-Sharkey announcement over the radio, and one of the world series games."

"Most of these people who passed on were in middle age. You hear a lot of warnings about how middle-aged people shouldn't take a violent exercise. But I really believe that getting good and angry is ten times as bad for a middle-aged vascular system as any amount of exertion."

Get Angry Easy
"And they say it is so easily. I can name you half a dozen men who have got themselves worked up so about this campaign, that they have aged ten years since June. I saw one of them the other day in my office. He took to his bed Wednesday after election, and is only now getting around with the aid of a cane. His pulse rate varies from 42 per minute to 90 per minute from time to time, and it's as irregular as a kid's who is about to propose marriage for the first time."

"Yes, after middle age they get mad pretty easy. There's my old friend, Dr. Will, one of the finest fellows you ever knew, he has a perfectly even disposition—he's mad all the time. I suppose by the time you have lived 50 years you have taken so much trouble to form your opinions that you think they are something sacred, and when they get upset or challenged it just naturally causes an explosion."

"Of course, the reason they die hanging on the radio is that when they get mad they pump two or three large hypodermics of adrenalin into their systems. It comes from their own adrenal factory in the adrenal gland, and it raises their blood pressure and stimulates their heart rate just like the adrenalin you buy at the drug store, until finally they have a blowout. The ones that come to me are all worried about the effect of coffee and tea and tobacco on their hearts, when they ought to be worrying about what something inside of them does to their hearts."

"And it isn't only the physical effect, it is what happens to your pulse. It's a dreadful thing to see a man lose control of his soul. And for a bunch of politicians! I know the political boss of a large city. He deals with both sides. His opinion of them is quite simple. He gave it to me last summer. 'They are all punks.' They can't do any real harm. Of course, with their hysing around they can ruin your business. This country ain't foolproof. But they can't damage your soul."

CHAPTER 10
THREE more days until Christmas. The shopping rush was already beginning to diminish. Perhaps the Do-Your-Christmas-Shopping-Early propaganda was beginning to show results. Alix thought gratefully. But there was also the important item that the Christmas rush had brought in a volume of sales that would add a few badly needed dollars to her pay envelope.

She rather hoped the last three days would be busy. Then she would be so utterly exhausted she would sleep most of the holiday.

She had to have rest because after the holiday she was determined to find a better job. The agencies had told her that after the first of the year there would be openings. If only she had been able to earn enough to put a little aside each week into her pension, salary she was unable to save. In fact, she was barely able to live. And she was often too fatigued to eat the one really important meal she allowed herself a day.

Kathleen had seen the change in her. Had Alix been the girl she was in other times, she would have seen it in herself, but she was only half aware of the tired face that looked back at her in the morning when she looked into her present too-bright mirror to comb that honey-colored hair that had lost none of its beauty.

An apathy had settled on her. An apathy that you saw in the mechanical movements of her, in the it-doesn't-matter makeup of her appearance.

It was the type of apathy that was as kind as it was dangerous. It was a kind of apathy as long as she existed in its protective swathing, she was falsely lulled into quietude by an anesthesia. It was dangerous because it kept her from the truth, delayed her preparedness against her tomorrow.

She knew that in an immediate tomorrow she wanted to better herself, climb out of the rut she was in as a salesgirl, get back to the kind of work she knew she could do. She despised the menial business of being merely an automaton who needed to know only the shelves and drawers in which certain types and sizes of gloves were kept and how to make out a sales slip, but she was glad to have it.

After the first of the year she would write letters to advertising agencies. Bright, sparkling letters with a new fact about a woman's point of view. She'd study the accounts the agencies serviced and learn some important thing to say about one to each agency.

After the first of the year, she would start fresh and enthusiastic. She'd have Kathleen then. But would she? True, she had promised to telephone Kathleen and had her good reasons for not doing so. But had Kathleen wanted to see her, Kathleen knew where she was. Kathleen must have been in the store a dozen times since their meeting, must have understood why Alix had not telephoned her.

Why should Kathleen want to live now? She had so many friends. What need had she of a girl who was a clerk in a department store? Could there have been Alix Carey thinking these things?

"Four-six-four! Four-six-four! Miss Carey, is that your number?" The section manager asked Alix when she answered the call for her departmental number as the store was closing that night. She had been covering her counter with its night cover.

"Yes, that's my number." Was something wrong?

"Then I have something for you," the section manager handed Alix a small pink card.

Your service will not be required after . . .

They didn't even give her another day! She had been hired on a Wednesday. This was Wednesday and her week was up. Christmas was three days away and she had $15. No, she had $18. She had $3 she had wrested from hours of back-breaking toil behind that narrow counter.

"But . . ."

"Sorry," the manager gave her an absent smile.

"Miss Hanaway, I am an interior decorator and perhaps if you were to recommend me for . . ."

The section manager consulted a small watch on her arm and gave Alix a cold smile. "You can say the personnel manager tomorrow, Miss Carey. I have nothing to do with any other department. Well, we'd better get finished up. I hope you have a good Christmas."

"A Merry Christmas!" Alix emphasized bitterly.

"Oh, thank you."

Alix slept until 11 o'clock the next morning, spent an hour dressing in her smartest clothes—she was glad she had so many attractive things that winter that she had bought for her trousseau—put herself in a falsely confident state of mind, donning it as though it were a borrowed hat and went back to the store that had so recently discharged her.

"Hello, you've been here before, haven't you?" The young college woman in the personnel department was young, capable and kind.

"Yes," Alix said. "As a matter of fact I've been working here for the last three and a half weeks but I was discharged yesterday. I was in the glove department."

"And is something wrong about the whole thing?" The other girl asked.

"Everything is wrong," Alix said, throwing herself entirely on the understanding of this stranger. "I guess you hear a good many sad stories here every day. I don't mean to make mine sad or to appeal to your sympathies."

"Go on, I want to hear it."

"I need a job. But I'm not really a salesgirl. I've been a successful interior decorator. Not in New York. But I . . . I did all the work on the Kleermann exhibit that you had here a couple of years ago. Do you remember it?"

Miss Nelson said that she did. "Well, I got interested in decorating then and went out to my nome out in Iowa to get a lot of practical experience. When I went out there the shop was running in the red. I have all the figures that show an $8,000 profit after my first year. In Bairsdale, that's a lot."

"It's a lot in New York these days. How does it happen you haven't been able to get a good job here?"

Alix wet her lips. "I've tried everywhere and now I haven't enough money to last more than two weeks. I've got to get work. I thought perhaps if I told you my experience, you might find something for me in the decorating department or the curtains or drapes or something. I can do all of that and I'd work for practically nothing."

Miss Nelson tried to remember that she was merely a voice in the personnel department but it didn't work with that sad-faced girl waiting for her to speak. She cleared her throat.

"I can't help you because there isn't a single opening here but . . . wait a minute . . . I have an idea! It may not turn out to be anything but a friend of mine named George Towner—he's a very successful decorator on Fifty-Seventh street—told me a friend of his was opening a small shop early in January and was looking for someone. The salary won't be much but if you'd like to look into it, I'll give you Mr. Towner's address. You'll like him, he's quite charming."

"Oh, thank you," Alix could hardly contain her happy relief.

Miss Nelson said a small prayer back of her teeth.

"Kathleen, I tell you that I went to the office and they said there was no one there by that name and they didn't know where she was. I got no satisfaction at all. Probably she's gotten a better job and, as I told you, she simply doesn't want to see us. She knows where we are."

"Kim Preston, there's something strange about it. I'm telling you that Alix Carey looked sick and desperate to me and that girl has pride as hard as a diamond. Kim . . ."

"Well, what's struck you?" "I've got it! I know what's the matter with Alix. She doesn't believe that I ever wrote her, ever wanted her back in my life. That's it! Well, I did write her at least six letters and I sent them to her apartment on Fifty-fifth street. I'm going to look into this. The mail used to be left in the hall and the superintendent might remember if he sent mail to her."

The superintendent didn't know anything about it but his wife did. "Shure, I remember and haven't I bin saving' all her mail for the young lady? She went away so sudden and says, 'Mrs. Anderson, I'll be sendin' you my address' but she never did so I've been keepin' it fer her."

And Mrs. Anderson produced a collection of mail. There were Kathleen's letters, the usual collection of advertising and four large square envelopes written in a heavy masculine script, two of them sent from England.

THE NEXT WAR

CERTAIN visionaries who write for a living have their own ideas about the dreary subject of the next war—just what manner of an affair it will be, how it will be fought and how won. War as the world has known it in the past, they say, is gone forever. How Getting Angry Makes People Old

by LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

I DID NOT see much of my old friend, Dr. Adrian Gibbs, during the election campaign. When I did, he showed no disposition to discuss, although I would have liked an expression from him, even in terms of that placid calm which characterizes most of his utterances. Now that it is all over, he broke his silence, the other evening.

"You know this business of people dying by the side of the radio when they hear one of Al Smith's speeches, which I read about a few weeks ago before the dreadful decision had been made, ought to be an awful lesson to the rest of us.

"Do you think that one of Al Smith's speeches is worth dying over?"

"Prize fights, too, and the world series—somebody died at the Joe Louis-Sharkey announcement over the radio, and one of the world series games.

"Most of these people who passed on were in middle age. You hear a lot of warnings about how middle-aged people shouldn't take a violent exercise. But I really believe that getting good and angry is ten times as bad for a middle-aged vascular system as any amount of exertion.

Get Angry Easy

"And they say I do it so easily. I can name you half a dozen men who have got themselves worked up so about this campaign, that they have aged ten years since June. I am one of them the other day in my office. He took to his bed Wednesday after election, and is only now getting around with the aid of a cane. His pulse rate varies from 42 per minute to 90 per minute from time to time, and it's as irregular as a kid's who is about to propose marriage for the first time.

"Yes, after middle age they get mad pretty easy. There's my old friend, Dr. Will, one of the finest fellows you ever knew; he has a perfectly even disposition—he's mad all the time. I suppose by the time you have lived 50 years you have taken so much trouble to form your opinions that you think they are something sacred, and when they get upset or challenged it just naturally causes an explosion.

"Of course, the reason they die hanging on the radio is that when they get mad they pump two or three large hypodermics of adrenalin into their systems. It comes from their own adrenal gland, and it raises their blood pressure and stimulates their heart rate just like the adrenalin you buy at the drug store, until finally they have a blowout. The ones that come to me are all worried about the effect of coffee and tea and tobacco on their hearts, when they ought to be worrying about what something inside of them does to their hearts.

"And it isn't only the physical effect, it is what happens to your poise. It's a dreadful thing to see a man lose control of his soul. And for a bunch of politicians! I know the political boss of a large city. He deals with both sides. His opinion of them is quite simple. He gave it to me last summer. 'They are all punks'. Of course, with their hugging around they can ruin your business. This country ain't fool-proof. But they can't damage your soul."

EDITOR'S NOTE: Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet", "Indigestion and Constipation", "Reducing and Gaining", "Infant Feeding", "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes", "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

CHAPTER 40

THREE more days until Christmas. The shopping rush was already beginning to diminish. Perhaps the Do-You-Christmas-a-Shopping-Early propaganda was beginning to show results, Alix thought gratefully. But there was also the important item that the Christmas rush had brought in a volume of sales that would add a few badly needed dollars to her pay envelope.

She rather hoped the last three days would be busy. Then she would be so utterly exhausted she would sleep most of the holiday.

She had to have rest because after the holiday she was determined to find a better job. The agencies had told her that after the first of the year there would be openings. If only she had been able to earn enough to put a little aside each week! At her present salary she was unable to save a penny. In fact, she was barely able to live. And she was often too fatigued to eat the one really important meal she allowed herself a day.

Kathleen had seen the change in her. Had Alix been the girl she was in other times, she would have seen it in herself, but she was only half aware of the tired face that looked back at her in the morning when she looked into her none-too-bright mirror to comb that honey-colored hair that had lost none of its beauty.

An apathy that she saw in the mechanical movements of her, in the it-doesn't-matter makeup of her appearance.

It was the type of apathy that was as kind as it was dangerous. It was kind because as long as she existed in its protective swathing, she was falsely lulled into quiet by an anesthesia. It was dangerous because it kept her from the truth, delayed her preparedness against her tomorrows.

She knew that in an immediate tomorrow she wanted to better herself, climb out of the rut she was in as a salesgirl, get back to the kind of work she knew she could do. She despised the menial business of being merely an automaton who needed to know only the shelves and drawers in which certain types and sizes of gloves were kept and how to make out a sales slip, but she was glad to have it.

After the first of the year she would write letters to advertising agencies. Bright, sparkling letters with a new fact about a woman's point of view. She'd study the accounts the agencies serviced and learn some important thing to say about one to each agency.

After the first of the year, she would start fresh and enthusiastic. She'd have Kathleen then. But would she? True, she had promised to telephone Kathleen and had her good reasons for not doing so. But had Kathleen wanted to see her, Kathleen knew where she was. Kathleen must have been in the store a dozen times since their meeting, must have understood why Alix had not telephoned her. Why should Kathleen want to

She had so many friends. What need had she of a girl who was a clerk in a department store? Could this have been Alix Carey thinking these things?

"Four-six-four! Four-six-four! Miss Carey, is that your number?" the section manager asked Alix when she answered the call for her departmental number as the store was closing that night. She had been covering her counter with its night cover.

"Yes, that's my number." Was something wrong?

"Then I have something for you," the section manager handed Alix a small pink card.

Your service will not be required after . . .

They didn't even give her another day! She had been hired on a Wednesday. This was Wednesday and her week was up. Christmas was three days away and she had $15. No, she had $18. She had $3 she had wrested from hours of back-breaking toll behind that narrow counter.

"But . . ."

"Sorry," the manager gave her an absent smile.

"Miss Hanaway, I am an interior decorator and perhaps if you were to recommend me for . . ."

The section manager consulted a small watch on her arm and gave Alix a cold smile. "You can see the personnel manager tomorrow, Miss Carey. I have nothing to do with any other department. Well, we'd better get finished up. I hope you have a good Christmas."

"A Merry Christmas!" Alix emphasized bitterly.

"Oh, thank you!"

Alix slept until 11 o'clock the next morning, spent an hour dressing in her smartest clothes—was glad she had so many attractive things that winter that she had bought for her touseau—put herself in a falsely confident state of mind, donning it as though it were a borrowed hat and went back to the store that had so recently discharged her.

"Hello, you've been here before, haven't you?" The young college woman in the personnel department was young, capable and kind.

"Yes," Alix said. "As a matter of fact I've been working here for the last three and a half weeks but I was discharged yesterday. I was in the glove department."

"And is something wrong about the whole thing?" the other girl asked.

"Everything is wrong," Alix said, throwing herself entirely on the understanding of this stranger. "I guess you hear a good many sad stories here every day. I don't mean to make mine sad or to appeal to your sympathies."

"Go on, I want to hear it."

"I need a job. But I'm not really a salesgirl. I've been a successful interior decorator. Not in New York. But I . . . I did all the work on the Kleemann exhibit that you had here a couple of years ago. Do you remember it?"

Miss Nelson said that she did.

"Well, I got interested in decorating then and went out to my home out in Iowa to get a lot of practical experience. When I went out there the shop was running in the red. I have all the figures that show an $8,000 profit after my first year. In Bardsdale, that's a lot."

"It's a lot in New York these days. How does it happen you haven't been able to get a good job here?"

Alix wet her lips. "I've tried everywhere and now I haven't enough money to last more than two weeks. I've got to get work. I thought perhaps if I told you my experience, you might find something for me in the decorating department or the curtains or drapes or something. I can do all of that and I'd work for practically nothing."

Miss Nelson tried to remember that she was merely a voice in the personnel department but it didn't work with that sad-faced girl waiting for her to speak. She cleared her throat.

"I can't help you because there isn't a single opening here but . . . wait a minute . . . I have an idea. It may not turn out to be anything but a friend of mine named George Towner—he's a very successful decorator on Fifty-seventh street—told me a friend of his was opening a small shop early in January and was looking for someone. The salary won't be much but if you'd like to look into it, I'll give you Mr. Towner's address. You'll like him, he's quite charming."

"Oh, thank you," Alix could hardly contain her happy relief. Miss Nelson said a small prayer back of her teeth.

"Kathleen, I tell you that I went to the office and they said there was no one there by that name and they didn't know where she was. I got no satisfaction at all. Probably she's gotten a better job and, as I told you, she simply doesn't want to see us. She knows where we are."

"Kim Preston, there's something strange about it. I'm telling you that Alix Carey looked sick and desperate to me and that girl has pride as hard as a diamond. Kim . . ."

"Well, what's struck you?"

"I've got it! I know what the matter with Alix. She doesn't believe that I ever wrote her, ever wanted her back in my life. That's it! Well, I did write her at least six letters and I sent them to her apartment on Fifty-fifth street. I'm going to look into this. The mail used to be left in the hall and the superintendent might remember if he sent mail to her."

The superintendent didn't know anything about it but his wife did. "Shure. I remember and haven't I bin saying 'all her mail for the young lady? She went away so sudden and says, 'Mrs. Anderson, I'll sendin' you my address' but she never did so I've been keepin' it fer her."

And Mrs. Anderson produced a collection of mail. There were Kathleen's letters, the usual collection of advertising and four large square envelopes written in a heavy masculine script, two of them sent from England.

COUNTY COURT RACE STARTS WITH MONROE DEFEATING WASHINGTON

OTHER SCHOOLS GO INTO ACTION FRIDAY EVENING

Boys and Girls to Seek Herald Trophies For Best Records

GOOD GAMES ON SCHEDULE

Co-operation of Hi Coaches Asked to Report Scores

The annual Pickaway county basketball title race started Wednesday evening on the Washington township court when Monroe township, with Center Holloway starting, knocked off a 41-19 victory.

The game was moved up from Friday because of school activities.

The preliminary found the Washington girls defeating Salt Creek. Monroe will have no girls' team this year because of a small number reporting for practice.

Monroe's second team won from Washington 34 to 26.

Holloway, Monroe's center, tallied 18 points with nine field goals. Other veterans back from last year's team are K. and E. Walters and Hill, providing Monroe a strong team in the race this year.

The other schools of the county will swing into action Friday evening with several contests to be interesting. Walnut goes to Deer Creek, Scioto to Pickaway, Darby to Muhlenberg, Perry to Salt Creek, and Jackson to Ashville.

Trophies at Stake
The Herald's trophies will be sought again this year by the county teams. Ashville boys and Darby girls won the beautiful trophies last year for finishing the season on top their respective divisions. A school to win permanent possession of the trophies must finish on top the league for three consecutive years.

A complete standing of games will be kept each week with coaches of the various schools asked to report their games by telephone or in person to The Herald immediately after they are completed. The telephone number is 581. Success of the league depends largely on the co-operation of the coaches. Calls should be made between 9:30 p. m. and 11 p. m. Friday.

ST. LOUIS MEN AIR OFFER FOR BROWN'S OUTFIT

CHICAGO, Nov. 12. — (UP) — Prospective purchasers of the St. Louis Browns spread their plans before American league club owners today, seeking their approval of a deal swinging the baseball club from the estate of Phil De C. Ball to a St. Louis syndicate headed by Donald L. Barnes, dapper investment house executive.

Kipke Picks All-American in Big Ten District

By HARRY KIPKE

Coach University of Michigan

ANN ARBOR, Nov. 12. — The 1936 season is more than half played, and that fact should be the starting gun for the annual barrage of selections of all-star teams. Of course the expects won't get down to the serious business of picking their teams for another month, but from now on you can expect that the fanning bees of gridiron enthusiasts will produce all sorts of chatter about the young men who have distinguished themselves thus far in the season.

A lot can happen between now and the end of the season. There will be plenty of young fellows who will flash out of the ensuing games with claims to fame. And some of the boys sitting on top of the heap right now may come a cropper. Individual glory can go glimmering just as fast as team supremacy.

Many in Midwest
The 1936 season thus far has produced its full share of gridiron stars. A glance at the names of young men playing on the teams of the midwest shows that a pretty fair kind of an All-American could be picked right here in our own back yard. When the honor roll finally is announced, surely many of these boys will be on the roster. The boys often are influenced by

All American Roll Call

Wally Gilbert, Auburn.

THROUGHOUT the south Captain Walter Gilbert of Auburn is regarded as the best center in the country.

A similar opinion is held by those along the Pacific coast who saw him play against Santa Clara. Gilbert is the best center ever developed at the Alabama school. Coach Jack Meagher, old Notre Dame, calls him one of the best pivot men he ever saw. Captain Walter was All-Southern last year.

WATSON MEETS VETERAN SPIKE ASHBY IN RING

Strawboard Entry's First Appearance To Be In Monday's Card

SHOW TO START AT 9

Merle Davis and George Patrick Are Matched

Local fighters and grapplers will have busy times Monday evening in the Circleville Athletic Club's combination show, scheduled to start at 9 o'clock instead of 8:30, because of the Boy Scout meeting in Memorial Hall.

Eddie Watson, protege of Frank Davis, will enter the ring against Spike Ashby, rough and tumble 155-pounder from Columbus. The appearance of Watson, pride of the Container Corporation of America, will be his first in Circleville. Every employee of the strawboard who is not working will be at the ringside.

Ashby has had a lot of experience and will provide him plenty of opposition.

Merle Davis and George Patrick, the latter a tough hombre from the country about Atlanta, will meet in a four-rounder at 135 pounds. Davis took a decision from Kid Lutz in the amateur show last winter and now is in pretty good condition. Patrick is one of a crew of brothers who love to throw their fists.

The feature fight puts Charlie Baxter of Pittsburgh and Bobby Cooper of Akron in the ring for six rounds.

The semi-windup will pit examine Buddy Hoskins in the ring with Tommy Gill for four rounds. The show is the first sponsored this fall by the Circleville Athletic Club and it deserves a lot of support.

IRISH ON WAY TO EAST FOR ARMY CONTEST

CHICAGO, Nov. 12. — (UP) — Notre Dame's humpy, dumpty football team departs for New York today for its third eastern invasion this season and not even Coach Elmer Layden knows what to expect when the Irish meet Army before 80,000 in Yankee stadium Saturday.

On their first two eastern invasions the Irish were blasted by Pittsburgh, 26-0, and nosed out by Navy, 3-0. Between these two dismal performances Notre Dame triumphed over Ohio State, 7-2, and looked strong enough to give any team in the country a battle.

All season the Irish have been up and down on alternate Saturdays, showing occasional flashes of power and then lapsing into mediocrity. Coach Layden attributed this inconsistency to lack of experience. Notre Dame critics blame the club's defeats on the team's lack of balance, pointing that there are seven good fullbacks but a crying need for strength at quarterback and right halfback.

About This And That In Many Sports

Solem and Simmons

Mr. Ossie Solem is on his way out at the University of Iowa and Mr. Oze Simmons is already that way. Solem has been on the spot for quite a while, now Oze, negro flash expected to make All-American a couple of years only to have his teammates fail him, has declared Solem has not given him a break. He has quit the squad and declares he will play no more football for the Iowans.

Stars in Other Areas

Don't be surprised if the midwest fails to produce as many All-Americans this year as in many previous seasons. The reason is that most Big Ten teams have taken it on the chin once, twice or more often, and the same holds true for Notre Dame and other unattached schools. Many of the nation's leading gridirers this year are found in the south and west, for instance Ace Parker of Duke, Sammy Baugh of Texas Christian, Lloyd Cardwell of Nebraska, Davy Davis of Southern California, Goddard of Washington, and in the line Tinsley of Louisiana State, Wally Gilbert of Auburn, Kuhn of Southern Cal, Herwig of California.

Uram and Widseth

A couple of certain midwestern choices are Andy Uram and Ed Widseth of Minnesota. North-western should rate at least one man and that might be Don Heap, Andy Kovatch or Vanzo, the great blocking and defensive quarterback. Ohio State will probably be without a choice although one of the linemen, maybe Charlie Hamrick, will place pretty high. Notre Dame is shy of outstanding men and so are Michigan, Wisconsin with exception of Jankowski, Indiana, Illinois and a couple of others. Marquette's Ray Buivid should make the team.

Notre Dame and Army

A prediction is coming up this week that would puzzle any follower of the pigskin. How about the Notre Dame-Army game? How would you predict it? It has taken considerable thought and even with all that the guess will probably be wrong.

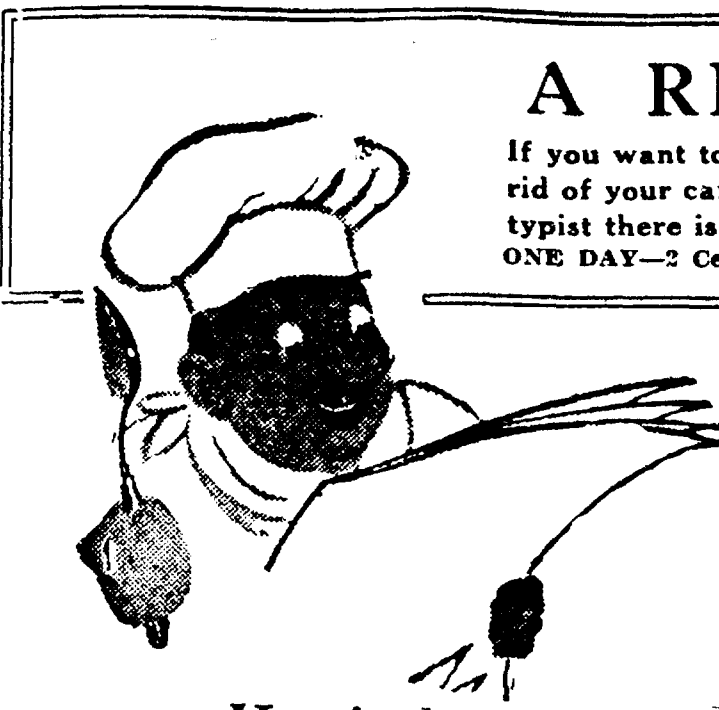

GOULD STUDIES BIG OFFER FOR JOE LOUIS TIFF

NEW YORK, Nov. 12. — (UP) — Joe Gould manager of Heavyweight Champion Jimmy Braddock, considered today an offer of $400,000 for the champion to engage in a 12-round, no-decision affair with Joe Louis in Atlantic City auditorium Feb. 22.

The guarantee was offered yesterday by Promoter Herman Taylor of Philadelphia. While Gould said it was alright with him, no contracts were signed.

Braddock is under contract to make his first title-defense under promotion of Madison Square Garden. He also has signed to defend against Max Schmeling of Germany next June.

Mike Jacobs who has both Schmeling and Louis under contract okayed the proposed bout as long as the winner agreed to defend against Schmeling in June.

OZE SIMMONS' ANGER AT END AFTER CONFAB

IOWA CITY, Ia., Nov. 12. — (UP) — Oze Simmons, swivel-hipped negro fullback, today withdrew his second "resignation" from the University of Iowa football team.

COUNTY COURT RACE STARTS WITH MONROE DEFEATING WASHINGTON

OTHER SCHOOLS GO INTO ACTION FRIDAY EVENING

Boys and Girls to Seek Herald Trophies For Best Records

GOOD GAMES ON SCHEDULE

Co-operation of Hi Coaches Asked to Report Scores

The annual Pickaway county basketball title race started Wednesday evening on the Washington township court when Monroe township, with Center Holloway starting, knocked off a 41-19 victory.

The game was moved up from Friday because of school activities.

The preliminary found the Washington girls defeating Salt Creek. Monroe will have no girls' team this year because of a small number reporting for practice.

Monroe's second team won from Washington 34 to 26.

Holloway, Monroe's center, tallied 18 points with nine field goals. Other veterans back from last year's team are K. and E. Walters and Hill, providing Monroe a strong team in the race this year.

The other schools of the county will swing into action Friday evening with several contests to be interesting. Walnut goes to Deer Creek, Scioto to Pickaway, Darby to Muhlenberg, Perry to Salt Creek, and Jackson to Ashville.

Trophies at Stake
The Herald's trophies will be sought again this year by the county teams. Ashville boys and Darby girls won the beautiful trophies last year for finishing the season on top their respective divisions. A school to win permanent possession of the trophies must finish on top the league for three consecutive years.

A complete standing of games will be kept each week with coaches of the various schools asked to report their games by telephone or in person to The Herald immediately after they are completed. The telephone number is 581. Success of the league depends largely on the co-operation of the coaches. Calls should be made between 9:30 p. m. and 11 p. m. Friday.

Kipke Picks All-American in Big Ten District

By HARRY KIPKE

Coach University of Michigan

ANN ARBOR, Nov. 12.—The 1936 season is more than half played, and that fact should be the starting gun for the annual barrage of selections of all-star teams. Of course the expects won't get down to the serious business of picking their teams for another month, but from now on you can expect that the fanning bees of gridiron enthusiasts will produce all sorts of chatter about the young men who have distinguished themselves thus far in the season.

A lot can happen between now and the end of the season. There will be plenty of young fellows who will flash out of the ensuing games with claims to fame. And some of the boys sitting on top of the heap right now may come a cropper. Individual glory can go glimmering just as fast as can team supremacy.

Many in Midwest

The 1936 season thus far has produced its full shares of gridiron stars. A glance at the names of young men playing on 14 teams of the Midwest shows that a pretty fair kind of an All-American could be picked right here in our own back yard. When the honor roll finally is announced, surely many of these names will be on the roster. The experts often are influenced by the success of the teams on which the boys played, and the teams around here have done fairly well this season.

Last year some experts picked as many as five midwestern men for "first" teams. Names like Jones and Smith of Ohio State, Smith and Widseth of Minnesota, Miller and Shakespeare of Notre Dame and Berwanger of Chicago appeared with monotonous regularity. Everyone remembers how consistently Berwanger was named.

There may not be another Berwanger lurking in the woods this season, but a fellow named Ray Buivid is going to get a lot of attention from the dopests. This bit of football dynamite plays with Marquette university's team, and his eleven is one of the few unbeaten and untied teams in the country. He's probably the outstanding player in this part of the country and is a pretty good 1936 version of the 1935 Berwanger. Ray has been the mainspring in his team's campaign to national recognition, and if it attains that distinction, will be the player primarily responsible.

Food for Debate

Just to furnish some dope to the debaters, let's go over the team rosters and pick out some names for them to conjure with. It's customary to start with the ends, so here are a few names to begin arguing about: King of Minnesota, Kovatch of Northwestern, Patanelli of Michigan, Wendt of Ohio, Peterson of Chicago and the injured Vergane of Purdue. Some of those boys are seniors; Vergane is a sophomore. You can be pretty sure that one or more of those fellows will be right up there when the final roll is made up.

Of tackles there are many; Tackles mean a lot to a team and it probably is due to the fact that midwest teams boast all-important posts that the eleven from this section have been doing so well in their inter-sectional battles. Indiana has been coming along strong and its success is due mainly to those two men named Livingstone and Dal Sasso. Add to those two such players as Widseth of Minnesota, Gibson of Northwestern, Zindell of Michigan State, Hamrick of Ohio and Golomgeske of Wisconsin and you have a squad to pick from that would make any Coach pretty confident of what was going to happen on a Saturday afternoon.

Picking out guards is another story. These fellows don't get an awful lot of attention from the critics early in the season. Their play is not spectacular as they are generally right in the middle of things and pretty well hidden from everyone's sight. But as the season progresses we'll begin hearing about them

Wally Gilbert Auburn

THROUGHOUT the south Captain Walter Gilbert of Auburn is regarded as the best center in the country.

A similar opinion is held by those along the Pacific coast who saw him play against Santa Clara. Gilbert is the best center ever developed at the Alabama school. Coach Jack Meagher, old Notre Damer, calls him one of the best pivot men he ever saw. Captain Walter was All-Southern last year.

WATSON MEETS VETERAN SPIKE ASHBY IN RING

Strawboard Entry's First Appearance To Be In Monday's Card

SHOW TO START AT 9

Merle Davis and George Patrick Are Matched

Local fighters and grapplers will have busy times Monday evening in the Circleville Athletic Club's combination show, scheduled to start at 9 o'clock instead of 8:30, because of the Boy Scout meeting in Memorial Hall.

Eddie Watson, protege of Frank Davis, will enter the ring against Spike Ashby, rough and tumble 155-pounder from Columbus. The appearance of Watson, pride of the Container Corporation of America, will be his first in Circleville. Every employee of the strawboard who is not working will be at the ringside.

Ashby has had a lot of experience and will provide him plenty of opposition.

Merle Davis and George Patrick, the latter a tough hombre from the country about Atlanta, will meet in a four-rounder at 135 pounds. Davis took a decision from Kid Lutz in the amateur show last winter and now is in pretty good condition. Patrick is one of a crew of brothers who love to throw their fists.

The feature fight puts Charlie Baxter of Pittsburgh and Bobby Cooper of Akron in the ring for six rounds.

The semi-windup will pit examine Buddy Hoskins in the ring with Tommy Gill for four rounds.

The show is the first sponsored this fall by the Circleville Athletic Club and it deserves a lot of support.

IRISH ON WAY TO EAST FOR ARMY CONTEST

CHICAGO, Nov. 12.—(UP)—

Notre Dame's humpy-dumpy football team departs for New York today for its third eastern invasion this season and not even Coach Elmer Layden knows what to expect when the Irish meet Army before 80,000 in Yankee stadium Saturday.

On their first two eastern invasions the Irish were blasted by Pittsburgh, 26-0, and nosed out by Navy, 3-0. Between these two dismal performances Notre Dame triumphed over Ohio State, 7-2, and looked strong enough to give any team in the country a battle.

All season the Irish have been up and down on alternate Saturdays, showing occasional flashes of power and then lapsing into mediocrity. Coach Layden attributed this inconsistency to lack of experience, Notre Dame critics blame the club's defeats on the team's lack of balance, pointing that there are seven good fullbacks but a crying need for strength at quarterback and right halfback.

Braddock is under contract to make his first title-defense under promotion of Madison Square Garden. He also has signed to defend against Maxie Schmeling of Germany next June.

Mike Jacobs who has both Schmeling and Louis under contract okayed the proposed bout as long as the winner agreed to defend against Schmeling in June.

About This And That In Many Sports

Solem and Simmons

Mr. Ossie Solem is on his way out at the University of Iowa and Mr. Oze Simmons is already that way—Solem has been on the spot for quite a while, now Oze, negro flash expected to make All-American a couple of years only to have his teammates fail him, has declared Solem has not given him a break—He has quit the squad and declares he will play no more football for the Iowans.

Stars in Other Areas

Don't be surprised if the mid-west fails to produce as many All-Americans this year as in many previous seasons—The reason is that most Big Ten teams have taken it on the chin once, twice or more often, and the same holds true for Notre Dame and other unattached schools—Many of the nation's leading gridders this year are found in the south and west, for instance Ace Parker of Duke, Sammy Baugh of Texas Christian, Lloyd Cardwell of Nebraska, Davy Davis of Southern California, Goddard of Washington, and in the line Tinsley of Louisiana State, Wally Gilbert of Auburn, Kuhn of Southern Cal, Herwig of California.

Uram and Widseth

A couple of certain midwestern choices are Andy Uram and Ed Widseth of Minnesota—Northwestern should rate at least one man and that might be Don Heap, Andy Kovatch or Vanzo, the great blocking and defensive quarterback—Ohio State will probably be without a choice although one of the linemen, maybe Charlie Hamrick, will place pretty high—Notre Dame is shy of outstanding men and so are Michigan, Wisconsin with exception of Jankowski, Indiana, Illinois and a couple of others—Marquette's Ray Buivid should make the team.

Notre Dame and Army

A prediction is coming up this week that would puzzle any follower of the pigskin—How about the Notre Dame-Army game?—How would you predict it?—It has taken considerable thought and even with all that the guess will probably be wrong.

GOULD STUDIES BIG OFFER FOR JOE LOUIS TIFF

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—(UP)—

Joe Gould manager of Heavyweight Champion Jimmy Braddock, considered today an offer of $400,000 for the champion to engage in a 12-round, no-decision affair with Joe Louis in Atlantic City auditorium Feb. 22.

DOUBLE OR BID HIGHER?

ONE OF THE most common and most puzzling questions arising is whether to bid higher and perhaps go down, or double and perhaps collect little or nothing, whereas bidding higher would have yielded game or slam. North and South today had no illusions as to having even a small slam, but South was right when it came to the choice between bidding higher or doubling opponents.

Bidding went: North, 1-Heart, third hand; South, 1-Spade; West, 2-Diamonds; North, 4-Spades, expecting to end bidding; East, 5-Diamonds, with neither side vulnerable; South, 5-Spades, instead of either doubling on his Ace of hearts or passing to note what his partner would do. That ended bidding, as higher diamond bidding certainly would have been doubled for a worth while penalty.

The opening lead was the J of diamonds. Dummy's Ace won. Declarer let go his lowest heart, to avoid loss of a trick therein. He then entered his hand by means of Bidding went: North, 1-Heart, third hand; South, 1-Spade; West, 2-Diamonds; North, 4-Spades, expecting to end bidding; East, 5-Diamonds, with neither side vulnerable; South, 5-Spades, instead of either doubling on his Ace of hearts or passing to note what his partner would do. That ended bidding, as higher diamond bidding certainly would have been doubled for a worth while penalty.

The opening lead was the J of diamonds. Dummy's Ace won. Declarer let go his lowest heart, to avoid loss of a trick therein. He then entered his hand by means of his Ace of hearts. The J of spades and another trump lead picked up West's spades. The K of hearts was led. Declarer ruffed a low heart, establishing two long cards of the suit in dummy.

The 4 of clubs was led. West won with the A, then led a low diamond. Declarer ruffed. A low club was led. West's 10, dummy's J and East's K fell. It made no difference what East led back. His side could not win another trick. Dummy held only two good trumps and two good hearts. Declarer also held two spades and the good Q of clubs, with dummy to ruff his low club. The cards were spread for 5-odd.

A double of the 5-Diamonds bid by East would not have been especially productive, yielding only 300 points. It was well that South re-bid.

county to clear up game law violations. Three men were fined Tuesday night and Wednesday morning for violations. Francis Snider, residing near Whisler, was fined $10 and costs Tuesday night for illegal possession of a muskrat pelt. He gave bond to settle his account. He was returned to court Wednesday afternoon and fined $25 and costs for shooting a pheasant out of season. He was committed to the county jail until his account is settled.

Harlow Warns of Drive
"We intend to clear this county of game law violators in our drive," Mr. Harlow said. "This is the largest number of furs ever found at one time in my district." The drive opened after numerous reports were received by local sportsmen of violations, especially hunting along highways. Through close cooperation with the conservation department more than 1,000 pheasants were raised and released in Pickaway county this year. The county has an unusual amount of game for hunters, but sportsmen were angered when they heard of violations.

AULD CO. PLANT IN COLUMBUS IS SCENE OF FIGHT

COLUMBUS, Nov. 12.—(UP)—The strike-besieged plant of the D. L. Auld Co., closed since Oct. 19, was reopened today when 75 workers broke through a picket line of 250 angry men and women. A police squad of 150 helped workers break through the picket line. Police rushed the picket line, swinging clubs, when a striker threw a wooden sign at an automobile. No one was injured but Lawrence Lewis, a picket, was taken into custody for investigation. Later three others were taken to the police station.

The disturbance started when three girl workers ran through the picket line. As the ran down an alley, pickets followed them, pushing and shouting. Police Chief John H. Dunn led 25 officers to the girls' rescue. They were escorted to a shed behind the plant and told to remain there until more workers arrived.

Alley Ordered Cleared
Chief Dunn told pickets they would have to clear the alley. "We don't object to a reasonable amount of picketing, but you have a mob here," Chief Dunn said. "Two or three hundred is too many."

Hugh Thompson, strike director, denied there was a mob. "We are picketing peacefully," Thompson said. A few moments later, pickets crowded about to automobiles containing workers. Police clubs again drove the pickets back. Thompson begged policemen not to use their clubs.

The woman said once, "I'm so weak, I don't believe I can go any further. But finally they moved on. The dog that the man called snoop or sloop, seemed well trained and obedient, like the dog that brought the baby to the Crawford house."

Ferguson identified the blanket in which the baby was wrapped as the one wrapped around the baby the mother carried.

Authorities wired towns along the highway, hoping the couple could be intercepted.

In New Orleans, Charity hospital physicians found the baby in perfect physical condition, though the navel cord had not been severed, indicating he had been born without medical aid.

They will keep the baby there for five weeks to assure his survival, and then return him to St. Tammany parish officials who probably will permit the Crawfords, who have two children of their own, to adopt him.

the Manzanera river near the Franceses bridge.

A secretly strengthened militia line was electrified to find the enemy approaching. Militiamen began a quiet enveloping movement and, opening fire, stopped the nationalists.

Surrounded in Park
The Moors and Legionnaires tried to retreat and apparently got back across the bridge into the park. But here, it was asserted, they were to all effect surrounded and it was believed all were doomed.

This maneuver was made public coincident with announcement that 200 civil guards, a shock unit of the nationalists, lost their way in the maze of woods in the Casa De Campo park, were surrounded and surrendered without firing a shot.

The trapping of the nationalist force of Moors and Legionnaires disclosed a new development of great importance to the defense of Madrid.

The men who met the nationalists were among the best troops the government has had at its disposal. For four months they had been in the passes of the Guadarrama mountains, Madrid's natural defense line far north and northwest of the city.

Under Gen. Francisco Galan and Gen. Julio Mangada, both promoted several times for bravery and brilliance, these troops were brought secretly down from the mountains and put in key positions.

Galan's Wife Killed
As Galan led his men into action, news was withheld from that nationalist artillery, destroying an apartment in Angracia street, killed his wife.

Until a communique reporting today's action mentioned laconically that men of Galan's and Mangada's forces met the nationalists, it was not even known they had been brought to Madrid.

There was a growing opinion that the nationalists had lost one great opportunity to take Madrid, and there was even belief that they might not have another.

On Sunday, it is now admitted, the loyalist forces were demoralized and close to panic. The nationalists could have walked straight through with hardly a county to clear up game law violations. Three men were fined Tuesday night and Wednesday morning for violations. Francis Snider, residing near Whisler, was fined $10 and costs Tuesday night for illegal possession of a muskrat pelt. He gave bond to settle his account. He was returned to court Wednesday afternoon and fined $25 and costs for shooting a pheasant out of season. He was committed to the county jail until his account is settled.

Harlow Warns of Drive
"We intend to clear this county of game law violators in our drive," Mr. Harlow said. "This is the largest number of furs ever found at one time in my district." The drive opened after numerous reports were received by local sportsmen of violations, especially hunting along highways. Through close cooperation with the conservation department more than 1,000 pheasants were raised and released in Pickaway county this year. The county has an unusual amount of game for hunters, but sportsmen were angered when they heard of violations.

AULD CO. PLANT IN COLUMBUS IS SCENE OF FIGHT

COLUMBUS, Nov. 12—(UP)—The strike-besieged plant of the D. L. Auld Co., closed since Oct. 19, was reopened today when 75 workers broke through a picket line of 250 angry men and women.

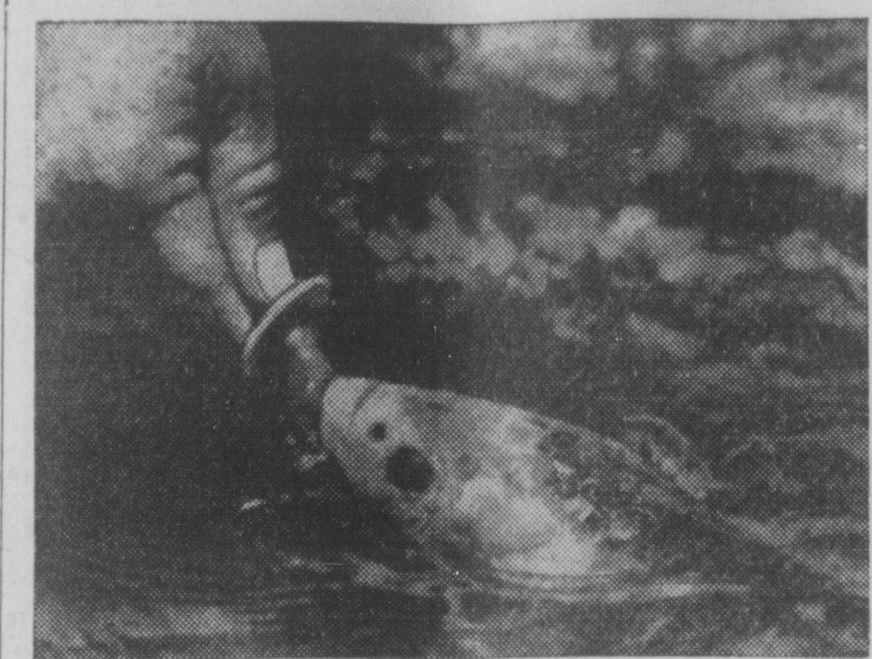

A police squad of 150 helped workers break through the picket line. Police rushed the picket line, swinging clubs, when a striker threw a wooden sign at an automobile. No one was injured but Lawrence Lewis, a picket, was taken into custody for investigation. Later three others were taken to the police station. The disturbance started when three girl workers ran through the picket line. As the ran down an alley, pickets followed them, pushing and shouting. Police Chief John H. Dunn led 25 officers to the girls' rescue. They were escorted to a shed behind the plant and told to remain there until more workers arrived.

Alley Ordered Cleared
Chief Dunn told pickets they would have to clear the alley. "We don't object to a reasonable amount of picketing, but you have a mob here," Chief Dunn said. "Two or three hundred is too many." Hugh Thompson, strike director, denied there was a mob. "We are picketing peacefully," Thompson said.

A few moments later, pickets crowded about to automobiles containing workers. Police clubs again drove the pickets back. Thompson begged policemen not to use their clubs.

FRESH SOLDIERS AID IN DEFENSE OF MAJOR CITY

the Manzanera river near the Franceses bridge.

A secretly strengthened militia line was electrified to find the enemy approaching. Militiamen began a quiet enveloping movement and, opening fire, stopped the nationalists.

Surrounded in Park
The Moors and Legionnaires tried to retreat and apparently got back across the bridge into the park. But here, it was asserted, they were to all effect surrounded and it was believed all were doomed.

This maneuver was made public coincident with announcement that 200 civil guards, a shock unit of the nationalists, lost their way in the maze of woods in the Casa De Campo park, were surrounded and surrendered without firing a shot.

The trapping of the nationalist force of Moors and Legionnaires disclosed a new development of great importance to the defense of Madrid.

The men who met the nationalists were among the best troops the government has had at its disposal. For four months they had been in the passes of the Guadarrama mountains, Madrid's natural defense line far north and northwest of the city.

Under Gen. Francisco Galan and Gen. Julio Mangada, both promoted several times for bravery and brilliance, these troops were brought secretly down from the mountains and put in key positions.

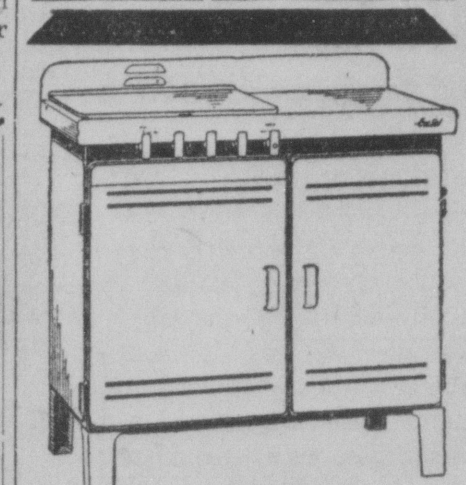

Galan's Wife Killed
As Galan led his men into action, news was withheld from that nationalist artillery, destroying an apartment in Angraia street, killed his wife.

Until a communique reporting today's action mentioned laconically that men of Galan's and Mangada's forces met the nationalists, it was not even known they had been brought to Madrid.

There was a growing opinion that the nationalists had lost one great opportunity to take Madrid, and there was even belief that they might not have another.

On Sunday, it is now admitted, the loyalist forces were demoralized and close to panic. The nationalists could have walked straight through with hardly a

SWAMP PEOPLE DEMAND CHILD

The woman told her, "you'll just have to wait until we get where we can get something to eat. We've got no money." The woman said once, "I'm so weak, I don't believe I can go any further. But finally they moved on. The dog that the man called snoop or sloop, seemed well trained and obedient, like the dog that brought the baby to the Crawford house."

Ferguson identified the blanket in which the baby was wrapped as the one wrapped around the baby the mother carried.

Authorities wired towns along the highway, hoping the couple could be intercepted.

In New Orleans, Charity hospital physicians found the baby in perfect physical condition, though the navel cord had not been severed, indicating he had been born without medical aid. They will keep the baby there for five weeks to assure his survival, and then return him to St. Tammany parish officials who probably will permit the Crawfords, who have two children of their own, to adopt him.

EVEN ROCKEFELLER LAUDS SPEECH BY JIM FARLEY

NEW YORK, Nov. 12—(UP)—Democratic National chairman James A. Farley's radio address after midnight was, in the opinion of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., one of the "most statesmanlike utterances made on either side during the entire campaign."

Rockefeller, who contributed to Gov. Alfred M. Landon's campaign, made this known in a letter to Farley, written as "one citizen to another," and made public today at National Democratic headquarters.

Farm mortgage financing in the United States in the 12 months ending May 31, 1936, declined about one-third as compared with the volume for the preceding 12 months. Governor W. I. Myers, farm credit administration, says that most of the mortgages written are refinancing operations rather than new indebtedness.
